City Council gets tough on city water problems

By NANCY HILLS

FINDING ITSELF a little short of "liquid assets," the Carmel City Council took action to build up the city's "account."

After hearing that Carmel's water consumption had not exceeded, but was within 0.01 percent of its yearly water allocation, the Carmel City Council nevertheless voted in a special meeting Aug. 11 to impose a 45-day urgency ordinance that suspends issuance of any building permit, business license or use permit that involves a change of water use.

As the ordinance reads now, there are no exceptions to the permit moratorium, even for projects that will reduce water consumption. During the 45 days, city staff will develop more programs and refinements to the ordinance. Those refinements include what type of projects can go forward and not "frustrate" the city's intent to establish a water reserve, said Staff Planner Brian Roseth.

The council also voted to request a review of the city's water allocation from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood turned the meeting over to Mayor Pro Tem Helen Arnold and stepped down, stating a conflict of interest due to his proposed building on San Carlos Street.

Water District General Manager Bruce Buel told the city council during the meeting that the Carmel's water consumption was 1030.73 ac. ft. from July 1, 1985 through June 30, 1986. That meant that Carmel was actually at 99.99 percent of its 1030.8 ac. ft. yearly water allocation. Therefore, the water district had no power to continue the water meter permit moratorium it imposed on July 23. A water district jurisdiction has to reach at least 100 percent of its allocation before the water board can invoke suspension of permits.

Preliminary figures from California-American Water Co. (Cal-Am) released in July showed Carmel at 100.4 percent of its allocation, and the water board on July 23 had placed a temporary moratorium on water connection permits in the city. The water board had been expected to re-establish that moratorium at its Aug. 11 meeting.

An audit requested by Carmel city staff and performed by Cal-Am revealed that 18 homes that were initially coded as in Carmel, were not. Seventeen homes are actually a part of Monterey County and one in Pacific Grove, Larry Foy, Cal-Am vice president and manager, explained. When their water use was subtracted from Carmel's water consumption, the city's use dropped below its allocation.

The city council, however, decided not to wait until the city reached its capacity and unanimously approved an urgency ordinance and four resolutions that will halt issuance of city building permits for 45 days and approves measures to reduce Carmel's water use now and in the future. The measures include the purchase by the city of 200 low-flow toilets to be sold to residents and businesses alike.

THE URGENCY ordinance, which suspends building permits, business licenses and use permits that affect water use, must be reconsidered within 45 days in a public hearing, according to City Atty. Don Freeman. During the public hearing, testmony is taken by the city council and the ordinance can be extended, dropped or modified and/or made permanent, Freeman explained.

In its present form, the ordinance mandates that:

- The city must be under 98 percent of its

Arrogance of power

Dear Editor:

All administrations — municipal, state and federal — assume a specific personality. The personality of the Eastwood administration can be fairly said to be one of arrogance of power. This became manifest at the first Carmel City Council meeting presided over by newly-elected Mayor Clint Eastwood.

At that meeting the mayor called for a vote to withdraw from two lawsuits begun by the previous administration in an attempt to control untrammelled development in the environs of Carmel. The mayor and his two colleagues on the council voted for withdrawal, notwithstanding the fact that decisions favorable to the city of Carmel had already been rendered by two Superior Court judges.

"Just because the judges said so doesn't make it right," said Mr. Eastwood. This is illustrative not only of arrogance of power, but also of an attack on the judicial system.

More recently this arrogance of power was displayed by Bill Brown, publisher of The Carmel Pine Cone and a planning commissioner in Eastwood's newly-constituted commission.

Referring to complaints about the crass manner with which the former commission members were dismissed, Brown stated that "Those who were kicked out were the ones screaming." (San Francisco Chronicle, July 24, 1986.)

We are not "screaming" Mr. Brown, but we and hundreds like us are completely disaffected by the arrogance of power displayed by the Eastwood administration. We are deeply concerned about the machinations of the planning commission as it proceeds to dismantle the Carmel General Plan and to subvert the 1929 ordinance which made the interests of Carmel residents paramount. It is time for the citizens of Carmel to combat this arrogance of power by vigilance and by democratic dissent.

A step backwards?

Dear Editor:

So the new planning commission sees no reason to limit the number of jewelry stores in Carmel in order to protect "competition and free enterprise" and two of the members are on record as opposed to design review for residential structures. Both of these issues are clearly at odds with the general plan which is supposedly the constitution by which planning decisions are made.

While the general plan is currently under review by a five-person committee, two of whom are planning commissioners, it would seem wise for the commission to act with some reference to what now exists. It would also seem wise, if not imperative, for residents of Carmel to learn about and to respond to recommendations pending from the committee. Otherwise, it looks like a giant step backwards.

Canine tragedy

Dear Editor:

On the way home from work this morning (Aug. 4) I was witness to a tragedy.

I noticed an import pickup ahead of me as we merged into Highway 1 from 68. There were two dogs in the back of it.

As the driver tried to enter the traffic lane he was forced to swerve. Another car was trying for the same space. Both of his dogs fell out onto the freeway.

The first was run over and instantly killed. The other lay writhing in agony and crying. This caused several cars to stop, which created an extremely dangerous situation. It's just a wonder there wasn't a couple of wrecks because of it.

I feel sorry for the dogs' owner. I'm sure he feels terrible. I hope he doesn't read this, because it will only make him feel worse.

Always secure dogs when you put them in the back of a truck. To have them loose isn't fair to the dogs — or other drivers. Nobody wants to see a scene like I've just described.

Never! Never! Never! leave an unsecured dog in the back of a truck. It's just a godawful nightmare waiting to come true.

We were always here

Dear Editor:

In answer to Jane Mayer's letter in the Pine Cone Aug. 7 quoting Fred Keeble and Olof Dahlstrom: Thank God we have such qualified men that are willing to give of their time again.

We are not under the influence of a dictator, we are Carmel-by-the-Sea. It is the right of individuals to build their home in the residential neighborhood to their own design. Jane Mayer knows the city has ordinances to control the size and density of a structure plus setbacks and heights. We have a qualified building inspector and an assistant. We don't need the planning commission to waste their time when there is so much to be done in other areas.

True Jane, these people did not attend the meetings of the General Plan, neither did I; but did some of you consider why? 72 percent of the voters told you why.

Now we have new commissioners and a change in the city council; let us be optimistic. With the review of the General Plan, we will have results that the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea will be able to work and live with, and our town will stay the beautiful place it has always been.

I am proud that I was able to work 12 years with these outstanding gentlemen and I support the new council 100 percent. There is no substitute for experience.

Water woes

"YOU NEVER miss the water till the well runs dry."

It may sound trite today, but Rowland Howard's words in 1876 still ring true. Water just isn't a problem or a major concern for most people until it no longer starts flowly freely from their taps. Prevent people from washing their car, watering their lawn, or, god forbid, flush their toilets, and then you'll see an outraged and indignant citizenry.

The well hasn't run dry just yet, but Carmel's problems with water in the past few weeks have been amply documented. Because Carmel could easily exceed its water allocation at any time now (it's at 99.99 percent) the city has taken it upon itself to impose an emergency building ban and adopt even tougher water conservation methods.

But the problem is not Carmel's alone. Other peninsula cities and Monterey County are rapidly approaching their own water limits and could soon find themselves in the same predicament. What if every jurisdiction within the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District were to exceed its water allocation? Water rationing is not out of the question.

What all this adds up to is that we can't keep using water as if it were an infinite resource. The water district doesn't set the water allocations, nature sets the true water allocation. The water district is not omniscient or omnipotent, it can only set what are really arbitrary limits based on projected water use, estimated rainfall, possible droughts, etc. etc.

A new dam — as much as it is needed — is not a panacea for the peninsula's water problems. Even with the increased water capacity of a new dam, a severe drought and increased usage could put us right back where we started from. Nature can sometimes be a cruel landlord.

The water district can only set these limits based on what is currently available and what each community's projected use is — which incidentally is determined by the individual communities. It should be up to the communities to police themselves — as Carmel has already done — to come up with conservation programs and ordinances enforcing and encouraging methods to conserve this precious resource.

There's no need for a community to use up all of its allocation just because it has it; that is why Carmel wants to keep its allocation at the 90 percent level for the future.

Around here we'll miss the water long before the well runs dry.

Thanks to Carmel PD

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter on behalf of Michaela Trostmann, who was involved in an incident at Ocean and Mission on the morning of Aug. 6, 1986.

She is a 20-year-old tourist from West Germany who does not speak English and has therefore asked that I express her deep gratitude for the kindness and help she has received from the Carmel Police Department. She stated that she had never seen police officers in Germany or anywhere else who treated people with the sort of kindness and understanding that she received from the people of the Carmel Police Department, and that she was most deeply moved by the experience.

I assisted as interpreter that day and I would like to add from my own observation that I, too, was touched by the empathy and great sensitivity with which the staff, in particular Dianne Yeoman and Sgt. William Uretsky, calmed and reassured the victim, and the extra effort made on her behalf to arrange for her return home, and for special security measures and safety precautions for every step of her long journey.

Please convey the deep gratitude of Michaela Trostmann and her parents to Sgt. Uretsky and Yeoman and to the others who have given such extraordinary assistance. I would like to add that being allowed to be of help to such a professional team — even if only in a small way — made me feel very proud indeed.

Watery confession

Dear Editor:

My son has been assisting in the remodeling of a building in Carmel. One item involved an older water heater which he brought home. This leaves me with a problem — the tank was and is three-quarters full of water.

Can we be prosecuted for removal from Carmel a controlled substance? Is it possible that Dirty Harry may hear of this and come after us?

I've been in Greater Metropolitan Carmel twice in 15 years so I wouldn't try to sneak the water in to your city. I doubt if I can mail it.

Perhaps the best thing would be to pour it into my septic tank. That way, nature will eventually get it to your city anyway.

Council gives boost to Sunset expansion plans

By DAVID LELAND

IT WAS a thankful Friends of Sunset Center who were granted $10,000 by the city council Aug. 5 towards the concept of an expanded Sunset Cultural Center.

The city's contribution will be applied to a $23,000 feasibility study, which will determine the need for a proposed 1,500-seat auditorium and 200-car underground parking lot at Sunset Center.

The remaining $13,000 for the study has been raised by the Friends of Sunset Center through private contributions.

San Francisco-based consultant Richard Mickley has been contacted to conduct the feasibilty study, said Burney Threadgill, president of the Friends of Sunset Center.

A decade has passed since the theater was initially proposed by late architect Robert Stanton, with colleagues Walter Burde and Eugene Bayol Jr. Until now, the city has been reluctant to sanction the project, citing fears of additional tourist traffic and parking problems.

"This will be the best thing that has ever happened to Carmel," said Virginia Stanton, wife of the late architect and member of the Friends of Sunset Center..

The proposed $10 million theater project also includes a town hall on the lower floor, rehearsal space and two activity rooms.

A FEASIBILITY study attempts to establish a "need" in the community. In his proposal, Mickley suggests the following market study:

- Measure interest and demand for the new center by groups using the facilities.
- Find out the importance of the arts to area residents.
- Determine public attitudes about the proposed center — and likely attendance.
- Test acceptability of the proposed site.
- Measure the potential base of public financial support.

Mickley said this will be done by conducting a survey of civic leaders and potential user groups (in person and by phone), and a telephone survey to measure public attitudes. He also recommends a survey of tourists and visitors.

Threadgill said the consultant is scheduled to visit Carmel next week to firm up the planned survey. He added once the study is underway, it will take about "six weeks" to complete.

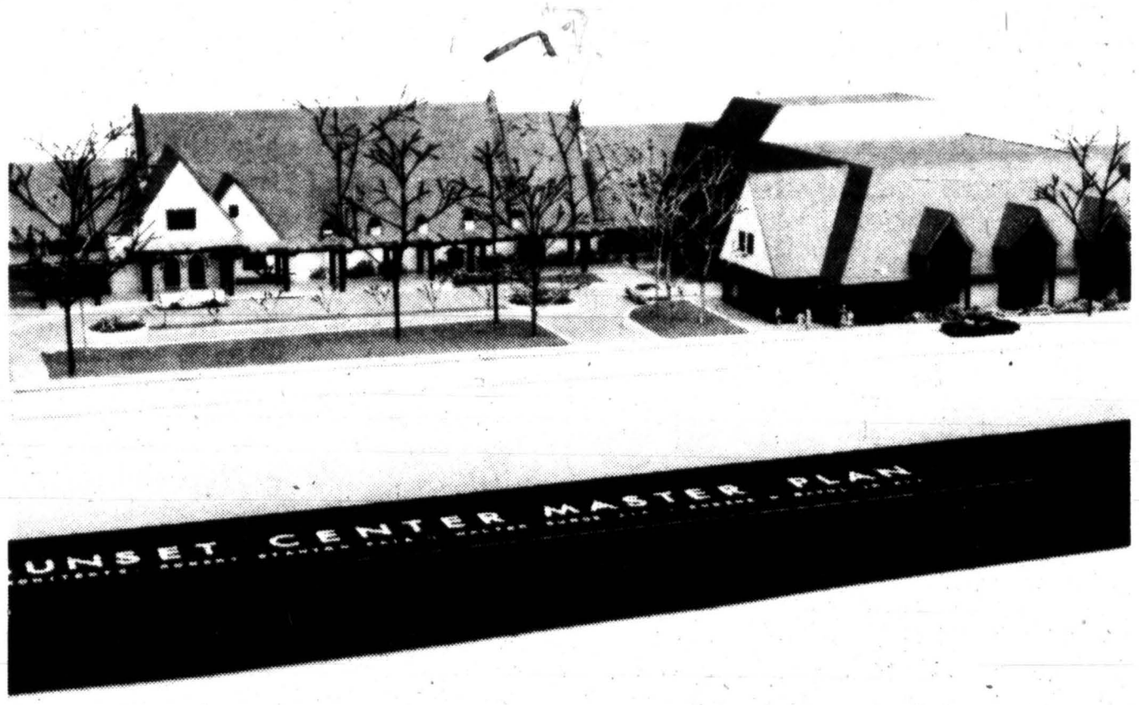
ONCE THE feasibility study has been completed, the task of raising the estimated $10 million for construction costs will be tackled by the Friends of Sunset Center.



ONE PLUS for the proposed $10 million Sunset Center expansion will be that Carmel's skyline will not be altered. The highest point of the complex will remain the pointed roof of the theater, shown here from the San Carlos Street level.

While the non-profit Friends expect to employ a full-time director to be in charge of fund-raising, a large part of the responsibility will be Virginia Stanton's.

Stanton was vague regarding particular events she would like to see, but added that interest in the community is at a fever pitch.

"Everywhere I go people are asking me about the project," she said. "I'm on cloud nine."

Threadgill said the Friends already have $1 million pledged towards the project by "several anonymous" donors.

THE FRIENDS of Sunset Center's positive feelings on the proposed auditorium complex appear to have spilled into city hall. Sentiment here favors the complex with its city-financed parking garage.

A proposed multi-level parking garage at Sunset Center would carry an estimated price tag of $5 million depending on how many levels are developed.

An undergound parking garage at Sunset Center was made the overwhelming choice by the city's residents in a survey taken one year ago.

At that time 68 percent of the respondents surveyed favored a parking facility at Sunset Center.

"I have no problem with the parking garage," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "If we can accept a two-story affair, I would go for it."

THE PRINCIPAL complaint made by proponents of the proposed Sunset Center expansion has been its lack of size. It is believed this has stifled Carmel's cultural voice on the peninsula.

The auditorium stage is currently too small to accomodate larger acts, according to Richard Tyler, Sunset Center director. But with the new stage, which is slated to be 40 feet by 60 feet, this problem will be erased.

"The stage area will be comparable to any symphonic stage area in the country," Tyler said.

Currently the stage area measures 33 feet by 52 feet, with an audience capacity of 733.

The most recent illustration of Sunset Center's woes occured when a Paris ballet troupe called to ask if it could perform in Carmel. The answer was "no," there was insufficient room for its performers on stage.

Tyler said the minimum stage size for a ballet troup is the size planned for the proposed auditorium stage.

Local performing companies are forced to make adjustments to the stage size. Recently Carmel Bach Festival organizers had to restage an entire performance.

"We placed the orchestra on the floor so the opera could be performed on stage," said Carlota Mellon, president of the board of directors for the Bach Festival. "It would be helpful if there were at least an orchestra pit."

Tyler said an orchestra pit is planned for the proposed auditorium.

Another reason for the proposed expansion lies in Carmel's geographic setting: it is about halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco. Tyler said Carmel is a natural stopping-off point for traveling companies.

"They've got to stop somewhere," he said. Tyler pointed out that most companies travel by truck or bus because of cumbersome stage sets and it is too long a trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco to make non-stop.

He added that Carmel would be able to get national touring companies at a lower price than normally charged in larger cities.

Because of the smaller crowds in Carmel the companies would charge a flat fee instead of the usual percentage basis, Tyler said.

Many residents also feel that Carmel is the cultural Mecca on the peninsula. Tyler calls it the "base for culture of the peninsula."

It seems a natural chain of events to expand the center to be able to provide a wider range of activities.

"We are very much in favor of it," Mellon said. "It would be a wonderful asset to the community to have all of its community events there."

"For a long time Carmel has been recognized as the cultural center of the peninsula," said Fischer. "I'm for it absolutely."

City nixes request for TV commercial

THE CITY has nixed a request by Volkswagen to film a television commercial Tuesday, Aug. 19, on Scenic Drive.

The main objection to the proposed all-day filming came from John Bowman, acting police chief.

"It would have created a back-up and a hassle," Bowman said. "It's summertime and they were not planning on providing any traffic help."

In addition to the 30 to 35 cars Volkswagen planned to use for the commercial, Bowman said there was the problem of local police having to provide pedestrian and traffic control.

Volkswagen had requested permission to shut the one-way road down for 15-minute segments during the day while the commerical was being filmed.

Just how much lost revenue this means to the city is unknown. "We never got that far," Bowman said.

Water board drops moratorium on Carmel, but calls for tough peninsula-wide water conservation measures

By NANCY HILLS

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board found itself in a very different position than it had anticipated Aug. 11.

The water board expected to hear that Carmel had exceeded its yearly water allotment and that the district would have to suspend issuing water meter permits to the city.

Instead, the board heard that Carmel had used 1030.73 ac. ft. of its 1030.8 ac. ft. allocation from July 1, 1985 to June 30, 1986. That put Carmel at 99.99 percent of its allocation and a water district jurisdiction must be at 100 percent or more before the water board can impose a moratorium, water district General Manager Bruce Buel explained. None of the other six jurisdictions were over their allocations, Buel said, but both Pacific Grove and Seaside are at more than 90 percent. The county was at 89.4 percent.

The board did, however, discuss recommendations for the water district policy advisory committee, meeting Aug. 25, about district rules in case a moratorium is placed on a jurisdiction. The PAC will consider the recommendations and make their own for the water board meeting in September.

The board recommends that:

- The the moratorium be automatically imposed when the district manager learns that a jurisdiction is over its allocation. The board will then hold a public hearing during its next board meeting, review the figures and, if necessary restate the moratorium.
- Use a "rolling year" statistic to determine if a jurisdiction is over its allocation. Using California-American Water Co.'s monthly water usage reports, the district would add the latest month's water use figures to the preceding 11 months to establish water consumption for a 12-month period. If a jurisdiction is over during those 12 months, a moratorium would be imposed.

Currently, the water district only considers water consumption figures once a year for the period from July 1 to June 30.

- That no exception would be made for water meter permits during the moratorium, even for projects that theoretically would reduce water use.
- Require a jurisdiction to impose its own water conservation rules if it exceeds its allocation.
- To lift the moratorium if a jurisdiction's actual metered water sales were at 98 percent of its allocation for three consecutive months during the "rolling year." However, if the same jurisdiction goes back over its allocation again within six months, the moratorium would be imposed for the full year.

THE WATER board responded to an official request from Carmel that the district review the city's allocation. Dick Heuer, water board chairman, told an audience consisting primarily of Carmel city representatives and citizens that the city would have to submit a formal request to the district stating why Carmel felt its allocation was inadequate and which jurisdiction within the district it would take the water from.

Heuer also said the matter would be referred to PAC for consideration.

A few Carmel residents addressed the board and told them why they felt Carmel deserved an increase in its allocation.

Ed Lee, calling himself an "irate citizen of Carmel" told the board that he felt that during the allocation process, existing water use was underestimated. The state Public Utilities Commission, Lee argued, had estimated a much higher total use for current users than the district had estimated for its mathematical formulas to establish the allocations in 1981.

Buel responded by telling the board that if Lee's statistics had been used, every jurisdiction would be over its allocation right now.

Alan Williams, a Carmel resident and developer, told the board that Carmel consistently used less water per meter than other jurisdictions and he felt that the city had not received its fair share during the allocation process.

Carmel was not the only jurisdiction heard from during the meeting.

Pacific Grove Councilwoman Susan Whitman told the board she felt that if in the future a general moratorium or rationing is imposed on all the jurisdictions, the ones that had used the largest percentage of their allocations should be the ones to bear the brunt of the restrictions. Whitman claimed that Pacific Grove had planned its water use and should not be punished if other jurisdictions had not successfully managed their allocations.

Another Pacific Grove Councilmember, Bob Russell, told the board he believed the connection fee to be counter-productive because it discouraged people from obtaining permits. Pacific Grove, Russell said, did not always comply with the water district permit process because of those reasons.

City gets tough on itself, imposes tight measures

water allocation for three months before the city will lift the moratorium.

• Water consumption will be tracked by using Cal-Am's monthly report of metered water sales in the city. The latest monthly figure will be added to the water consumption during the eleven preceding months to establish a continuous cumulative year total. The water allocation is based on a year of water use.

• The city establish over a five-year period a water reserve through reduction of its water use.

The city has set allowable water use for this year at 98 percent of its allocation, establishing a reserve of 2 percent. The city could begin to re-issue permits when city water use reaches 98 percent of its allocation, or 1010.2 ac. ft., and stays there for three months.

In succeeding years, the reserve is to increase by 2 percent annually until 1991, for a total reserve of 10 percent. By 1991, the total water use allowed in the city would be 90 percent of its allocation, or 927.72 ac. ft.

The city would be considered in "non-compliance" with its ordinance if water consumption exceeds the allowable water use during any fiscal year.

If at any time city water consumption exceeds that fiscal year's allowable water use and begins to use the reserve, the city will suspend the issuance of any permit that involves an increase in water use.

However, the ordinance also recognizes the effect of increased water use during periods of low rainfall. If rainfall is less than 16 inches during a year in which allowable water use is 96 percent or less of the allocation, the city can use up to 98 percent before suspending building permits.

• Once a moratorium is set, the city water use must meet its water use goals for three consecutive months before the suspension is lifted.

The ordinance states that "the city recognizes the unique, regional responsibilities of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District but finds that the management of the city's water resources can best be attained through local actions that are fully consistent with local planning goals, objectives, policies and ordinances ... which do not result in the suspension of local autonomy in land use matters."

THE COUNCIL also unanimously approved an urgency resolution authorizing the city to use $21,900 from the Hostelry Tax fund to purchase 200 ultra low-flow toilets which use 1.5 gallons per flush. By purchasing the toilets in a bulk quantities and reselling them without a profit the city will reduce the price per unit from $315 to $109.50 plus tax, the staff report states.

Mary Jahr-Purvis, city code enforcement officer, submitted a report to the council that five hotels have recently changed ownership and are required to retrofit their water fixtures according to city code.

The hotels Jahr-Purvis listed are the Pine Inn with 49 units; Cypress Inn, 33 units; Rosita Lodge, 48 units; Normandy Inn, 48 rentals; and Green Lantern Inn, 19 rentals. Rosita Lodge is working on its retrofit, she said, and the Normandy may not have to retrofit because of the type of toilets it currently is using.

Jahr-Purvis explained after the meeting the hotels are not required to retrofit to the 1.5-gallon flush toilets the city is acquiring, but to 3.5-gallon models.

"We're hoping by making the 1.5 gallon available, they'll be encouraged to purchase them," she added.

The city also hopes to encourage single-family and multiple-family homes to purchase the units.

Similar programs have been tried in other cities where water is in short supply, the staff report said.

Indictments won't affect Bank of Carmel lawsuits

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE INDICTMENT of three key figures in the May 1984 collapse of the National Bank of Carmel is not expected to compromise a proposed settlement of several civil court lawsuits.

And although no final resolution has been reached, the settlement also means there is a chance shareholders will receive some reimbursement for their lost stock.

That is the opinion of two key lawyers involved in the settlement talks.

"My hope is that it (the indictment) won't affect the compromise at all. I don't think the indictment surprised anyone," said Salinas attorney Mark Drever, representing about a half dozen of the former directors of the Bank of Carmel named in a series of lawsuits.

Denis Shanagher, a San Francisco-based attorney representing the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC), agrees: "Hopefully it won't have any effect. I think the negotiations are in the final stages. Most of the details have been resolved."

Indicted last week were Newport Beach businessman Leonard Levy, whose line of credit reportedly triggered the collapse of the bank; and former National Bank of Carmel executives Robert Boynton and Richard Fritz, who apparently authorized the allegedly unsound loans to Levy.

When the bank collapsed it left investors holding about $12 million of apparently worthless stock, including $3.7 million by the board of directors.

A delicate compromise is being pieced together between the attorneys for the various civil litigants, the FDIC and the directors. The FDIC suit seeks to recoup what it sees as losses due to bad loans retained after other loans and assets were purchased by County Bank and Trust of Santa Cruz.

Obviously, both attorneys are hesitant to talk about the negotiations for fear that any premature publicity could derail any compromise.

Asked about the chance of a reimbursement for stockholders, Shanagher said, "There is a chance of that."

Questioned how much, Shanagher replied, "I'm not in a position to tell you. I don't think the final numbers have been worked out."

Neither attorney could predict when a settlement would be finalized. As Drever said, "It's going to take a while. It's extremely complicated because of the number of cases and the complexities of each case."

But Drever is pleased that after two years the focal point of the investigation into the collapse of the bank has been shifted from the directors.

"The indictment shifts the focus where it should be — that's on Mr. Levy," Drever said.

Drever believes that the board of directors has "borne the brunt of the publicity" when its members are "just as much victims as the shareholders."

Carmel turns down funding for lobbyist

CARMEL CITY officials have declined a request from South Lake Tahoe's city manager to participate with other resort cities in funding a lobbyist in the state capitol.

While the consortium is also involved in exchanging information, the primary purpose would be to fund a lobbyist in Sacramento at a cost of between $5,000 and $7,000 per year, said City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

Schmitz said he believes Carmel has good relations with its legislators and does not feel the city will benefit from having a legislative advocate in Sacramento.

Carmelo School may find a new lease on life

By DAVID LELAND

AN EERIE silence surrounds Carmelo School in Carmel Valley. No children are present in the deserted school — the halls are void of any shrill laughter or horseplay. But all this could change this fall if the school district approves a proposed child care center to be housed there.

Picked to spearhead and research the project is school Supt. Bob Infelise, who believes the estimated $30,000 child care center has a good chance of becoming a reality.

"If we say it's 'do-able', that's it," he said. "We are optimistic."

Carmelo School became vacant about four years ago when it was closed because of declining enrollment. Since that time it has been used on a part-time basis for adult classes.

Infelise and his staff will conduct a survey next month of parents with both school-age and pre-school children to evaluate the need for child care in the district.

The findings will then be presented to the school board in late September. Infelise said he hopes to have the child care center in operation by next January.

"We anticipate that there is a need," he said. "There are waiting lists at the other centers."

The district currently has two co-op child care centers located at Bay School and Tularcitos Parent Co-op Nursery School. But these require parents to participate in their child's care.

The proposed Carmelo child care program will be fee-based according to the "market price" and will involve no parent participation, Infelise said.

He added that while it will take about $30,000 to get the program underway, once it is in operation it will be entirely self-supporting.

An example of "market prices" at one day care center contacted showed rates ranging from $69 a month for only pre-school care to $222 a month for care from 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Along with all-day care for children, the Carmelo School day care center plans several other programs. These are:

• A pre-school education program. Children enrolled in all-day care would automatically participate in this program.

• Before- and after-school care. This would help prevent "latch key" kids; children who are unsupervised at home after school hours.

• Drop in child care service. This would provide "as-needed" service for parents.

• A program for childen to participate bi-weekly or on a limited schedule in the pre-school program.

• A program for infants under the age of 2.

Infelise said the program will accomodate between 30 and 35 children.

Parents wanting more information may call Chuck Phillips at 624-1546.

THE PROPOSED child care center is only one of three projects which the board is considering for joint occupation of Carmelo School. If all goes as planned, the school will also house a fine arts academy and adult education section.

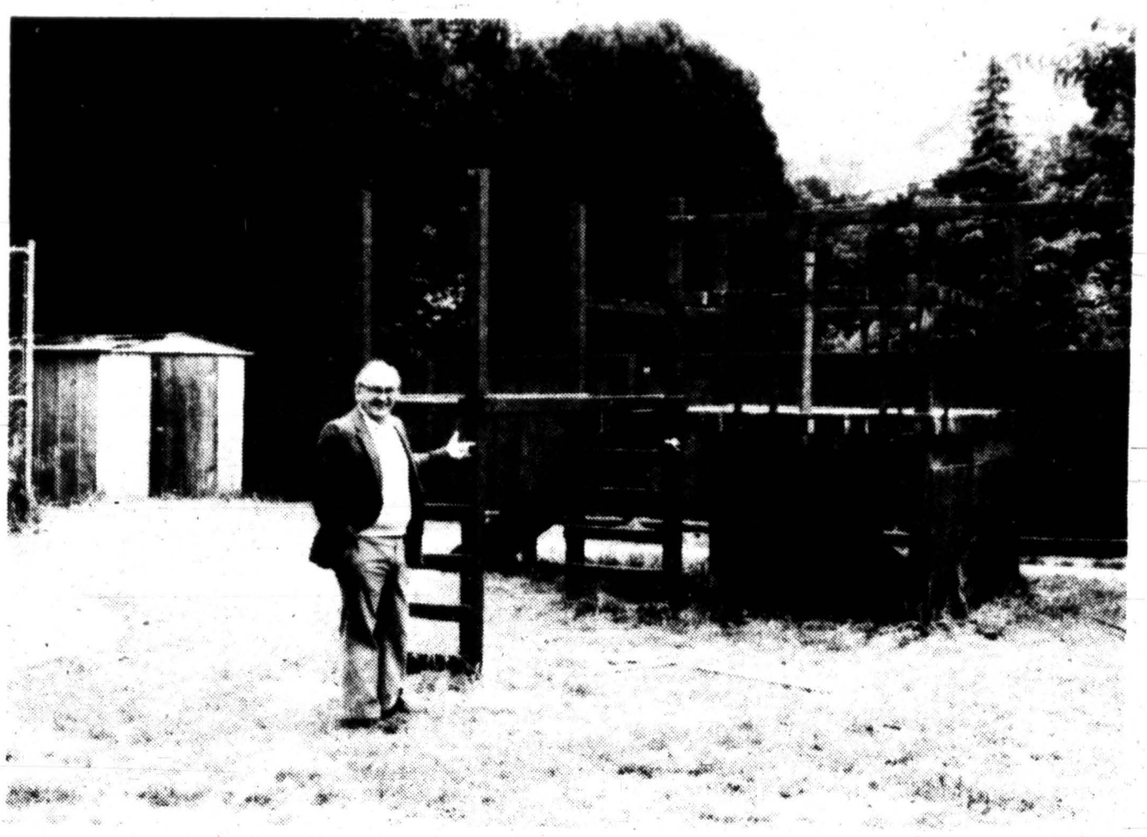
The Frohman Academy For Musical Theater Education, which recently lost its lease at its Pacific Grove location, has approached the school district for the use of one of Carmelo Schools' three wings.

The child care center will occupy one wing.

The Frohman Academy has offered to pay the school district about $1,500 a month rent. In addition to paying monthly rent, the academy will pay $5,000 a year to provide a music instructor to teach a daily class in instrumental music at Carmel High School.

The Frohman Academy plans to offer dance, drama and music classes at the school. Academy officials also want to house its administrative offices there.

The third wing of the school would house Adult School Education. Its subjects range from aikido to classes offered by the Monterey Institute of Touch.



BY NEXT January the children's playground at Carmelo School in Carmel Valley may be in full swing. Carmel Unified School District Supt. Bob Infelise is confident that any restoration work on the long-vacant school will be minimal if the school board approves a proposed day care center to be housed there. (David Leland photo.)

Raccoons making their presence known again

By DAVID LELAND

THERE'S BOTH good news and bad news for Carmel wildlife lovers. The good news is, after a three-year absence, raccoons are once again making their homes here. The bad news lies in the fact that some people are feeding them, which can transform the normally shy creatures into brazen bandits.

Three years ago, Carmel's raccoon population dwindled after being stricken with canine distemper, a form of pneumonia which officials think the coons picked up from eating out of dogs' dishes left outside.

Now, they are not only back, but are keeping local animal control officals busy with continued reports of mischief.

"We're receiving one complaint a week," said Valorie Henderson, Carmel animal control officer. "These range from chasing the family pets and tipping over garbage cans to lifting the foam rubber tops off hot tubs."

Henderson advised pool and hot tub owners to invest in a heavy top to keep the raccoons out of the water.

"Raccoons love water," she said. "They clean their food in it, bathe in it, and will eventually bring the rest of their clan over for a swim."

The raccoon, normally a shy, docile animal, more times than not is content to forage for food in its natural setting of trees and underbrush. But after eating human food, its culinary tastes move up in class — no longer will nuts and berries suffice.

"People think the raccoons are cute, so they feed them," Henderson said. "But they are really doing more harm than good."

After becoming accustomed to human food, the raccoon loses its shyness and knows no fear.

"I can't let my 3-month-old puppy out at night," said Kelly Reed, who has been battling the bold critters at her wooded house on San Carlos Street. "If I go outside with her, the raccoons get on their hind legs and hiss at me."

While currently only three or four raccoons are bothering her, Reed said the first night she spotted a pack of six — "the size of small golden retrievers" — eyeing her house. She is careful to lock her door each night; the animals get on their hind legs and twist the door knob, trying to get into her house for a real treat.

While there is reason for concern, there is no need for panic, Henderson said, with only about 25 percent of Carmel's raccoons having made the change from nocturnal coon to fearless bandit.

She added that while Carmel residents and raccoons have long had a symbiotic relationship, continued feeding could turn into an ugly situation.

"The raccoons are going to be here," Henderson said. "People have to learn to cope."

YOU CANNOT begin feeding raccoons and then decide to stop, Henderson said. The best and only way is to never feed them in the first place.

"They can become very angry (if you stop feeding them)," she said. "They will tear the roof off of a house and even attack people." She added raccoons can have the temperament of badgers, who have been known to attack bears.

Most commonly, raccoons begin to get a taste of manmade food when pet owners inadvertently leave the dog or cat's dish outside with food still in it, Henderson said.

Nevertheless, once the problem begins, it quickly escalates.

When animal control officers are called to rid a house of bandit raccoons they bring with them a trap — what's called a "Have A Heart Trap."

This 2-by-4 foot metal cage lets the coon walk in one end, after food is placed in the center, and become trapped when the door shuts behind it.

There are, however, two problems with this solution: One, by the time animal control officers arrive with the trap, too much time has elapsed since the raccoon began his eating binge; the raccoon has become too fat to get through the small door in the trap. Secondly, rather than crawling in for the food (tuna, peanut butter, canned cat food), he simply reaches a paw in, scoops it out and leaves.

CARMEL ANIMAL Control Officer Valorie Henderson displays a problematic "Have a Heart" raccoon trap used by the city. Carmel raccoons are getting too fat to fit in the traps and are often clever enough to steal the bait inside without getting caught. (David Leland photo.)

If officials are successsful in catching the raccoon, it is taken to the SPCA and observed for illness. Upon certification of good health, the animal is released into another area — never his old stomping grounds.

If raccoons are bothering you or your pets, or you simply want to take preventative measures, there are several things which can be done:

- Keep your wood pile off the ground. Raccoons love cool quiet places — they will rest underneath.
- Invest in floodlights. Raccoons are nocturnal and tend to shy away from bright lights. It should be noted, however, that the more brazen coons will do a vaudeville show under the lights.
- If you have raccoons living under your house,purchase cannisters of mothball disks at a hardware store and wait until the raccoons leave at night. When they vacate, spread the disks under the house and board up any holes. A word of caution: use heavy wood with nails, do not use a board propped against the house with a rock as this is too easily romoved by the raccoon.
- Dip rags in ammonia, or anything smelly, and put them in the corner of the yard where the raccoons are coming in. "Don't use fish oil or they will all be over for dinner," Henderson cautioned.
- Secure trash cans in racks to prevent them from being knocked over.
- Near the house, keep tree limbs pruned to prevent raccoons, agile climbers, from between trees and house.
- Make sure all pets hve rabies, feline and canine distemper shots.

ANIMAL CONTROL officals are currently trying to get larger traps to catch the raccoons, but for the time being Carmel residents have the only remedy.

"Don't feed the raccoons no matter how cute they are," Henderson said. But she also advised against unneeded violence against the raccoons saying:" Don't hurt the animals as most of them are harmless and shy."

Not so fortunate in their recovery from canine distemper are Carmel's tree squirrels, who disappeared with the area's raccoons three years ago.

"We don't know when they'll be back," Henderson said. Hopefully next season."

While Carmel has lost its tree squirrels, it has gained, as can be evidenced at Carmel Beach, ground squirrels.

Henderson said this is a first in Carmel for these creatures. She assumed they migrated to the area from nearby Pebble Beach. They also proliferate around Lovers Point in Pacific Grove.

While these squirrels, running through and about the bushes and sand are cute, Henderson said caution should be taken because they do bite.

If you are bitten by either a raccoon or squirrel, you should go immediately to your doctor. Henderson also advised keeping current on tetanus vaccinations.

The association gathered thousands of the fish from the river, which is rapidly drying up, and transported them to a holding pond on Ed Haber's ranch property at Quail Lodge in the Valley. "We're trying to capture 20,000 fish this weekend," said Thomas, president of the association. "How well we do depends on the condition of each hole. Some of the holes are deeper and cooler because it's their last holdout before the Carmel River entirely dries up." (Holly McFarland photo.)

Rio Road's bumpy ride will be smoothed out soon

By DAVID LELAND

IT'S BEEN a bumpy trip but Rio Road's problems are scheduled to be smoothed out soon.

For several years Rio Road has been deteriorating due to soil and drainage problems. At its Aug. 5 meeting, the Carmel City Council released $204,000 from a transportation and development fund to begin work on the road.

Just when construction will begin is still "up in the air," according to Greg D'Ambrosio, director of administrative services. The city is presently taking bids from engineers.

Once an engineer is chosen the project will take "about six weeks" to complete, D'Ambrosio said. He added that, in order to avoid the rainy season, construction would begin either in September or be postponed until spring. This depends on how soon an engineer is chosen and the plans are completed.

Presently Rio Road ranks as the busiest street in Carmel. One study by the Carmel Police Department showed Sunday traffic on Rio Road averaging 7,616 cars per day, while Carpenter Street and Ocean Avenue totalled only 6,842 cars for the same period, a difference of 774 cars.

This, coupled with a city engineer's six-year study showing continued degradation of the road, prompted the city council to take action.

The construction will entail removal of all road surface material and 18 inches of subsoil from underneath the pavement. This will be replaced by quality soil and base rock, D'Ambrosio said.

"This should solve 99 percent of the problem," D'Ambrosio said.

He added the city had wanted to consolidate a drainage project to cope with occasional flooding at the Little League diamond next to the Carmel Mission Basilica, but the cost to the city was prohibitive.

Other action taken by the city council at its Aug. 5 meeting included:

• Approved unanimously to allow temporary parking with a permit on Scenic Road between Eighth and Santa Lucia avenues one-half hour after sunset until 5:30 a.m.

Residents on Scenic Road will be issued a permit for their guests by the president of the Scenic Road Property Owners. The permit will state the length of time the permit can be retained by the user.

City to try to recoup legal fees from its Mission Ranch lawsuits

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL CITY officials have authorized a Pacific Grove attorney to file suit in the California Supreme Court to recoup its legal fees spent on the Mission Ranch court proceedings.

Mike Stamp, who has represented Carmel in its legal battle over the proposed Mission Ranch resort development, told The Pine Cone that he will file for $7,500 and an unspecified amount in filing fees later this week.

It will take 30 to 45 days for the state's highest court to respond, he said.

In July, the San Jose Court of Appeals upheld a lower court's ruling saying that Monterey County must certify and prepare an environmental impact report prior to rezoning the Mission Ranch property.

The EIR is to protect the fragile wetlands from any adverse impacts of development.

The Mission Ranch Corp. had proposed to build 61 units on about 8.25 acres — none of it wetlands.

The 61-unit density is based on the Carmel Area Land Use Plan that provides permissive zoning for between two and six units per acre, but not to exceed 75 homes on the site.

The ruling allows the Monterey County Board of Supervisors an opportunity to increase the size of the protected wetlands and thus decrease density.

Stamp said there is nothing unusual regarding the city's effort to regain its fees, which falls under the Private Attorney General's Action.

CONGRESSMAN Leon Panetta in his office on Capitol Hill discusses a wide range of issues that could affect Carmel-area residents and also talks about his chances as the Democrats' vice presidential nominee in 1988. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Rep. Leon Panetta: Affairs in Washington D.C. 'trickle down' to Carmel

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WASHINGTON D.C. — In his third-story office in the Cannon building on Capitol Hill, Rep. Leon Panetta has a map of the world — a symbol that seems to say that no matter what happens in Washington, it affects even the remotest regions of the world.

And there's plenty happening in Congress these days that will play a role in the future of the Carmel area, most of it in the areas of federal spending.

A veteran Democratic congressman from Carmel Valley, Panetta recently talked with the Pine Cone about a broad range of issues now before Congress, some of which merely have a "trickle-down" kind of effect while others could be felt like the force of a sledgehammer.

In the interview Pannetta discussed the impacts of Gramm-Rudman, offshore oil drilling, the voucher system to pay for education, a new measure on undocumented aliens in agriculture, and whether the government will step in and help with the construction of a new dam on the Carmel River.

Panetta also unveiled Capitol Hill sentiments on the favorites in the already-underway race to succeed President Ronald Reagan in 1988 and his own oft-rumored chances as a possible vice presidential candidate.

With Carmel already facing a building moratorium because water use has exceeded the city's allocation and the rest of the Monterey Peninsula nearing its limit, there is some thought that the federal government and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers may assist with the proposed Carmel River dam.

But the cities and Monterey Peninsula Water Management District should not anticipate any serious discussions until after a public vote on the dam, probably in 1988.

"There would have to be a substantial cost sharing by the people for the corps to even consider it," Panetta explained.

As far as Panetta is concerned, there is litte reason for the government to study its potential involvement in a dam project until after the public vote.

The continuous attempts to open the California coast for new offshore oil exploration is a battle familiar to Panetta, who was burned last year when Secretary of the Interior Donald Hodel backed out of a compromise.

Since that controversy, Panetta has coauthored legislation that would renew the moratorium while long-range negotiations continue with Hodel and the oil companies.

THAT MORATORIUM is to be considered by the Senate when it takes up a House-adopted bill on appropriations for the Department of the Interior.

Under the compromise, lease sales would be delayed until at least 1989.

It is Panetta's goal to use that time to develop a long-range plan for the entire California coast rather than adopt piecemeal programs for separate areas.

Saying he feels "pretty confident" of passage, Panetta predicts that measure will be considered by the Senate sometime in September.

Two vital economic considerations in this area — the military and social security income for the large retirement community — will not be affected by the Gramm-Rudman bill that requires the federal government to reduce the deficit through massive spending cuts, Panetta said.

"Generally in terms of the military community of the Monterey Peninsula all of them are well protected," Panetta said, dispelling fears of a decade or so when government spending cuts threatened to close Fort Ord.

And a recently enacted defense appropriations bill included funds for 300 more housing units at Fort Ord, a project that eventually could help ease the tight peninsula market.

Another Panetta-backed proposal is in the works to help provide subventions to military families who must pay for storage of furniture and other possessions while waiting for base housing.

The future of social security is often debated and always raises concerns in the Carmel area, which has a large retirement-age community.

Panetta calls the social security program safe.

"Social security has been increasing over the past few years and has been protected from budget cuts. It's exempt from Gramm-Rudman," he said.

Another key recent action concerning the retirement monies is a ban on government borrowing from the social security trust fund to pay other debts or finance special projects, Panetta added.

Gramm-Rudman itself is not expected to have drastic implications for the local community unless the legislature fails to trim the federal deficit.

According to Panetta, the federal government is required by the Gramm-Rudman legislation to reduce the burgeoning deficit by $144 billion by 1987.

'IF WE don't reach that target the question is how much, in fact, will then have to be cut," he said.

If Congress fails by a substantial amount,

The ways of Washington even have effect on Carmel

say $20 to $30 billion, then additional cuts may have to be made that would have a "significant impact" in the areas of health care and military retirement benefits — issues close to the heart of peninsulans, Panetta continued.

Panetta has supported Gramm-Rudman and is disturbed at recent attempts by legislators to change the rules so that cuts are made automatically through the Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

This gives Congress an opportunity to avoid tackling the hard issues in public, Panetta believes.

In a statement to the House of Representatives, Panetta called on the vote-method to determine budget cuts, saying, "The backup procedures (for Gramm-Rudman) require Congress to vote for the necessary deficit reductions and they require the president to sign them into law.

"This will require courage and leadership that neither has demonstrated in the past."

Gramm-Rudman is not the only financial headache in Congress this year — tax reform is another.

The big controversy on the new tax package is the individual retirement account (IRA), the popular pension plan that allows individuals to deduct $2,000 ($4,000 for working couples) in contributions annually.

The Senate version of tax reform allows for those without company pension plans to keep their IRA deduction. However, there would not be a deduction allowed for those who have a company retirement program.

The House version, on the other hand, would maintain IRA deductions at status quo.

Another tax reform issue is the sales tax deduction — the Senate eliminated that break. But Panetta said there's a "good chance" that the sales tax deduction will be restored in the final reform package.

Another Senate versus House dispute is over the capital gains tax. Again the Senate wants to eliminate the deduction while the House would rather see it revised so that some of the breaks are maintained, Panetta said.

The wrangling will continue this month, although "optimistic projections" have tax reform passed before the August recess. Panetta sees the package wrap-up delayed until September.

'THEY'RE WORKING on it on a day-to-day basis, including Saturdays," Panetta said.

Panetta generated controversy of his own a few years back with his measure that would have established a "guest worker" progam for aliens.

A compromise plan recently has come out of the judiciary committee that Panetta says has won support of labor groups, farmers and some Hispanic leaders.

The measure basically allows those undocumented aliens who have worked in agriculture for at least 60 days in a row to be automatically provided "green cards," the official permit to work in this country.

It is only for agricultural workers, however, and would not affect the undocumented aliens in the garment factories of Los Angeles, for example.

The measure also will provide for penalties to be levied against those who knowingly employ illegal aliens, Panetta said.

The congressman calls the measure a "good compromise," but admits that "we still have a few hoops to go through because obviously it is a controversial bill."

On the possibility of a shift from public education policies to the voucher system, Panetta said it is doubtful such a drastic overhaul can be made because of the existing funding problems the government faces.

The proposed system basically provides parents with a set amount of money in the form of a "voucher." The parents then could use the voucher to pay for basic education and add personal funds to attend more exclusive schools.

Panetta opposes the voucher system "at this point ... First of all we're going to have a tough enough time maintaining the current level of educational financing."

He said the government probably will "freeze" public school financing and any program changes that cost extra money "would just hurt public education."

Rumored to be a possible running mate for presidential candidate Walter Mondale in 1984, Panetta's name once again comes up when talk on Capitol Hill shifts to the Democrats' ticket in 1988.

"There was talk in the Mondale period," Panetta admits and he knows that his name is being discussed again.

Panetta says Congress is his number one priority, but he would consider an invitation to a ticket.

"This is a day-to-day job ... You do your best each day because if you really try to look ahead too far where you may want to go that begins to control your everyday decisions," he said.

'IF YOU do the job right, those opportunities may come along but I'm not seeking them," Panetta continued.

"If someone were to say you could be part of a ticket, obviously I would consider it."

Currently, Panetta gives Colorado Sen. Gary Hart "a little bit of an edge because of his name recognition" as the Democrats' front-runner. Hart lost to Mondale in his quest for the Democratic nomination in 1984.

Others frequently mentioned include New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, Sen. Joe Biden of Delaware, Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt.

As for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who in 1984 sought to be the first black nominated as a major party candidate, Panetta said it is doubtful that he will win the Democratic nomination.

"I think Jesse Jackson, as he was two years ago, could be a spoiler," Panetta said. However, Jackson is "not likely" to be chosen as a vice presidential candidate because he "tends to be too controversial," Panetta added.

Mid Valley fire board to honor CV Manor, hold demonstration

THE BOARD of Directors of the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Protection District will honor residents of Carmel Valley Manor and put on a 15-minute demonstration of rescue equipment at a meeting to be held at the fire station Aug. 20.

The board will be adopting two resolutions of appreciation to Carmel Valley Manor and the Residents' Council of Carmel Valley Manor for their support and donations to the fire district in memory of the late Fire Chief Jim Barrett.

Also, the fire department will conduct a 15-minute demonstration of new rescue equipment at 7:45 p.m. in the fire station parking lot. The rescue equipment consists of an "air bag" for auto extrication. The department is the first in the area to use this equipment.

NEW VACCINATION LAW

In explaining the new state vaccination law which went into effect in California on July 23, is made the following statement for the guidance of parents, teachers and school officers:

In event that a case of smallpox develops in a school district the only persons who will be excluded from school will be the patient and other residents in his home. Persons who have been exposed by these other residents who have not been vaccinated will not be excluded as heretofore. If, however, smallpox becomes very prevalent in the district, the State Health Officer may order the entire closing of the school to all persons, with no distinction being made between vaccinated and unvaccinated children.

PINE PITH, PITCH AND BARK

It may not be long before Carmel folk will again be craning their necks to view another of America's great dirigibles. Sunnyvale's hangar, once the home port of the Macon, which was wrecked near here, may again be occupied. Certain Californians have been urging the government again to go in for large lighter-than-air craft, and have got from the Secretary of Navy a reply that is not without promise.

Unquestionably the success Germany has had with the new Hindenburg and Japan's plans for trans-Pacific dirigible travel have stirred U.S. officials to serious consideration of another try with the big gas bags.

CHITWOOD QUITS COUNCIL IN ROW OVER YOUTH CENTER

The roof blew off City Hall last night. John S. Chitwood fired off a verbal resignation from the city council and walked out of the session in protest of the group's three-to-two vote to pass on to the Carmel School District without comment on a request from the Carmel Recreation Center Board for $5,000 in school funds to operate the center. Chitwood, veteran of more than 11 years on both the Center advisory board and the City Council, construed the action as a failure of the council to endorse the Youth Center itself.

SHARKS BASK OFF CARMEL BAY

The sharks are back in Carmel Bay, possibly signaling the return of a species depleted by local fisheries in the 1940s and 50s.

The sight of large numbers of sharks basking in the waters of Carmel and Monterey bays used to be a common one, according to Bob Lee, a marine biologist with the California Department of Fish and Game, but this year is the first in a long time that so many have been seen.

The sharks, formally known as Cetorhinus maximus, have been noted for several days, basking off Carmel Point and Point Lobos. The ominous-looking black dorsal fins — sometimes as many as 40 of them — have been seen moving lazily around in the offshore waters, but the sharks are eating plankton, not people.

All's Fair

GET THEE to the 50th Mounterey County Fair at the Monterey County Fairgrounds and see the Carmel Business Association booth and scarecrow.

There you'll catch the unusual sight of Carmel business people manning the booth in friar's robes — they might be arrested for false advertising. These friars are selling Bill Bates posters — reproductions of the Carmel map on the wall next to Nielsen's Market — and buttons. Clint Eastwood buttons, of course.

Chuck Poland organized more than 40 volunteers to be at the booth — which depicts the Carmel Mission, thus the robes — from opening day, Aug. 12 through the fair's closing on Aug. 17.

The CBA scarecrow, constructed by Pebble Beach resident Sue Dewar, will represent the CBA entry in the fair's first scarecrow contest. The scarecrow, replete with ice cream cone and Carmel Pine Cone announcing His Honor's big win, will be holding down the fort in the 4-H building along with several others.

The CBA is in charge of the entertainment (besides the robes) on Saturday, Aug. 16 and have scheduled a performance by the Dixieland Four with Barney Laiolo on the gutbucket and a "one-man historical presentation about the founding of the early California Missions as seen through the eyes of (Father) Junipero Serra" as performed by James Patrick Kinney.

The so-called "A FFAIRE" Committee includes volunteers Lee Chamberlin, Bud Allen (he came up with the name), Joan DeMers, Florence Berrey, Elinor Laiolo, Richard Tyler, Barney Laiolo, Sue Hutchinson, Sue Dewar, Chuck Poland and Alan Brenner.

WISHART'S AGAIN

Richard Pepe called to say that he owns Wishart's Bakery on Ocean outright, paid cash for it, and escrow closed in late July. The lawsuit involving Pepe and Michael Montana is about loss of funds due to an interruption of a business transaction.

Pepe had started to buy the bakery last year, decided against it, then changed his mind and reactivated his interest in the business when Montana was in process of purchasing the bakery. Montana is suing Pepe for interruption of his business transaction.

Meanwhile, the answer is yes, Pepe is the owner of Wishart's. "We're here, we're not going anyplace, and we own the place outright," he said emphatically.

LITTLE BITS

Little bits that are actually pretty big bits, but since I can't seem to get anyone to call me back, they remain little bits.

• Green Lantern Inn on Casanova and Seventh has sold to a group called Green Lantern Partners. If you're an unsophisticated, average, everyday folk like myself, who would normally think, wow, what a coincidence, a company that already exists with the same name as the place they buy. Usually, they are a group of investors that get together specifically to buy something, such as an inn or hotel, and name their company after what they are purchasing. It's all a matter of economics.

Names on the business license include David Meyers, president; Michael Santin, vice president; and James Claus, secretary/treasurer.

I did manage to talk to the new resident manager, Rosemary Bolton, who runs the bed and breakfast with her husband, Bill. The Boltons have moved to Carmel from Oceanside in Southern California, where they owned and operated a restaurant.

Rosemary Bolton told me that the Green Lantern Inn started out a private home in 1915 and then changed to a bed-and-breakfast. As the years went by, the owners acquired more homes around it and expanded to its present size of 19 rooms and one manager's unit. It's furnished with antiques and collectables to preserve its original ambiance.

The inn serves a "wonderful breakfast," Bolton said, of croissants, fruit, homemade muffins and rolls. In the evening wine and cheese is served.

• If you're thinking about going out to Bud's Ice Cream in The Crossroads, think again. The ice cream parlor has closed "temporarily," according to the sign on the door, though why anyone would close an ice cream parlor temporarily during the summer is beyond me.

• If you miss former Left Bank Cafe owner Kathleen Cardinalli's smile and good cheer, drop on by Friar Tuck's Restaurant on the corner of Dolores and Fifth. Since the Left Bank closed in Carmel Plaza earlier this year, Cardinalli has been working at Friar Tuck's, which is now open 6:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday. Cardinalli is holding down the fort during those hours, serving the regular luncheon menu and some of her desserts from Left Bank.

By the way, those looking for a place to have an ice cream sundae can find it there.

ON HAND for the opening of the Monterey County Fair, Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood inspects the Carmel Business Association entry in the fair's first scarecrow contest. The scarecrow was constructed by Sue Dewar of Pebble Beach. (Mac McDonald photo.)

SIGNATURES EXPANDING

Signatures is opening what might be called a branch office on Lincoln in the former location of Joan Winter's Boutique. Jim Delaney, Signatures owner, describes the shop as "better women's wear, dresses, accessories, and handmade sweaters." He said the first location on the corner of San Carlos and Seventh will continue to operate. He chose the new spot because he wanted something closer to Ocean and needed room to expand a little.

The new location will carry primarily sweaters, slacks and furs, Delaney said.

Joan Winter's Boutique has actually been Dorothy Whelan Boutique for the past year but no sooner was she here, then gone.

NEW GALLERY

There's a new gallery that should be opening this week in the former location of Knitting-by-the-Sea on Lincoln near Ocean.

Wildlife sculptor Brian Arthur is transforming the space into a studio and gallery for his sculptures and the works of others.

Arthur said he works primarily in porcelains, terracotas and some bronze and creates all types of wildlife, from owls to pelicans.

"I'll mainly be doing local wildlife," Arthur said.

A line of his work, Arthur said, is currently being sold through Gumps Department stores. He will be selling that line in the gallery as well as the one-of-a-kind and original pieces, he added.

In addition to his own art, Arthur said he plans to carry works by John Stobart, "the finest marine painter in world," and Mourie Huntley, an English landscape painter.

LOS LAURELES LODGE HAS NEW OWNERS

The sale of the historic Los Laureles Lodge was finally complete June 30 and now it new owners are Dr. David Thorngate and his son, David Thorngate, Jr.

David Thorngate (the Younger) explained that his family has lived the peninsula for many years, but are doctors, not hotel owners. He, however, took a different path and has been working for Hilton Industries for the past five years. His most recent assignment was the Portland Hilton.

As the resident manager, with his wife Cris, the junior Thorngate said that nothing substantial will change in the 28-room lodge with restaurant and bar. Even the "Singing Sheriff" Pat Duval will still be featured Friday and Saturday nights. The chefs in the restaurant will remain the same — "They're very good," he said — and the Victorian decor will still grace the interior. The pool will stay open for $3 per person to the public.

"My impression of the lodge is a very rustic, ranch-style atmosphere," Thorngate said, adding that they get a lot of golfers there and work with Carmel Valley Country Club, Laguna Seca and Del Monte Golf courses.

The current history of the lodge began in the 1830s when the land belonged to Jose Boronda. In 1919, Del Monte Properties — same owners of The Lodge at Pebble Beach and Hotel Del Monte — purchased the lodge and used it for visiting "dignitaries" particulary when the sun wasn't shining on the coast — which probably means Los Laureles got a lot of activity.

In the 1930s, Muriel Vanderbilt Phelps bought the property and built the pool now used by guest and residents alike. In the '40s the property was converted into a resort. If you don't believe me, go to dinner and read the menu. It's all there and more.

CARMEL SHIRT WORKS

New owner but not a new face at Carmel Shirt Works on the third floor of Carmel Plaza. Once the manager and now the owner, Therese Marie Dibenedetto bought the T-shirt shop from owner John Redmond. Everything will remain the same, she said, and the shop will continue to silkscreen their designs on the sweatshirt, T-shirt or carry bag of your choice.

PARADISE-1, BAVARIAN-0

CARMEL MAYOR Clint Eastwood with Alan Brenner, a member of the Carmel Business Association "A FFaire" Committee, display the Bill Bates poster the CBA is selling at its fair booth. Profits from the sale of Bates posters and Eastwood buttons, also available at the booth, will go to the Carmel Youth Center, according to CBA Executive Manager Lee Chamberlin. Brenner, you might notice, is not dressed like a typical Carmel businessman, except of course, for the fact he has a cross to bear. The costume is a part of the CBA booth's Carmel Misson theme. CARMEL VOICE

Out and about

ENJOYING a night out at the Hog's and Bud's Pub were the Noperts and their friend Susan Coss. Mrs. Nopert (Jo Ann) is in real estate and her husband was the former owner of L'Escargot Restaurant in Carmel. Susan is with Hospice and happy to be living in Carmel. Walter Becker showed up and bought a round of drinks for the group. Mayor Clint was on hand and we talked about his new picture; he'll be editing the film here and will not have to do this in filmland (Hollywood). Clint was signing autographs for a group from Hamburg, Germany. He's just received the script for a blockbuster film which is supposed to be awesome. Can't divulge the script until we get the green light and you'll be the first to know.

HERE AND THERE

The Robottis are up in arms about the new candy store approved in Laub's building on Ocean and Dolores streets. Why doesn't the city limit the number of candy stores in town? Hansel & Gretel, owned by the Robottis, has been here for years . . . they've paid their dues, and opening the town for more candy stores is ludicrous. Come on, planners, let's get with it. Give the old-timers the edge because of longevity and sacrifice.

Dee Merritt of KRML having dinner at Hanagasa, authentic Japanese food, according to folks who've been to Japan. She's a nut for Japanese food, having spent some time in the Orient. Dee (from Sausalito) handles the music chores from 1 to 6 p.m. Saturdays at KRML. She commutes the distance each week. Lynn Coles is the new traffic manager at KRML and also spins disks in the afternoon.

Glad to see Mike Aldrete back with the San Francisco Giants after a brief stint in Phoenix. Mike returned to the Giants and doubled in the winning runs in a game recently. Mike, who matriculated at Stanford, is one of three major leaguers from this area . . . the others being Pete O'Brien from Carmel and Peter Incaviglia of Pebble Beach. The latter two play for the Texas Rangers.

THE LUCKY ONE

Enjoying breakfast at Friar Tuck's with her husband and two boys was lottery winner Janice Prudhel. I'd be smiling too if I had just won $100,000. Her husband, Tim, co-owner of the Red Lion Inn, says they've been celebrating since Janice picked up the winning ticket from Ron's Liquor Store. Best to you, folks. Enjoy.

TALK SHOW HOST

Larry King, king of the radio talk shows (at least in this broadcaster's opinion), a big hit at the Hyatt Regency Monterey as he emanated his show from there during the California Broadcasters Convention. Larry, who never went to college, is perhaps the best at what he does and in an interview recently with Shirley Temple Black, he proved it by asking the right questions and letting Shirley open up from all angles. This is a true sign of a good interviewer. Larry is on Mutual Radio and on CNN Television. A busy guy whose salary is in the $700,000 range. Not bad, for a guy who never went to college.

NO SILENCE THERE

Our hats off to the group known as White Silence, which made its debut at Filipino Hall a few nights back. This rock group stirred the hearts of all those who attended this concert. Not a bad deal, either.

FIRE LINES
BY MITCH KASTROS

Know your extinguisher

Of the more than 2 million fires that are reported in America each year, 1.5 million occur in the family residence. Since most large fires start out as small ones, having and knowing how to operate a portable fire extinguisher can be a big help in protecting property and lives.

If a fire can be attacked within two minutes after ignition, it can usually be extinguished without the aid of professional firefighters. However, having the proper extinguisher will help insure your own safety when fighting a fire.

There are several types of extinguishers on the market, but the best kind for home use are the dry powder, carbon dioxide and halon types.

Dry powder extinguishing agents consist of a chemicals with a sodium bicarbonate, potassium salt or monoammonium phosphate base. Of the three, only chemicals with a monoammonium base are effective on all three classes of fires: Class A (ordinary combustibles such as wood and paper), Class B (flammable liquids) and Class C (electrical) fires. Chemicals with a sodium bicarbonate or potassium salt base are effective on Class B and C fires. Don't worry about remembering the names and uses of these chemicals, because all dry powder extinguishers indicate what classes of fire they are effective on.

Carbon dioxide extinguishers contain liquefied CO^2 that vaporizes when discharged to provide effective protection against Class B and C fires. This extinguisher breaks up the contents of the fire by destroying the oxygen. It provides cooling capability to prevent flashbacks and leaves no residue.

Halon extinguishers contain liquefied bromine gas that also vaporizes when discharged. It also leaves no residue, and will not cause further damage to materials and equipment. The main difference is that fire extinguishment can be accomplished with considerably lower concentrations of halon than with carbon dioxide.

The smaller halon extinguishers are effective on Class B and C fires, and the large ones are rated effective on Class A, B and C fires.

When using carbon dioxide and halon extinguishers indoors, make sure to adequately ventilate the area afterwards to help replenish the oxygen supply that was destroyed.

When shopping for a fire extinguisher it is best to buy from a fire extinguisher company, and always buy an all-metal unit. The plastic extinguishers that are on retail shelves are cheaply made, and virtually unserviceable.

It is very important that your extinguisher be serviced once a year, especially if it is a dry chemical one. When an extinguisher sits unattended for a long period of time, the powder will eventually cake up, turn solid and not discharge properly when needed. The gauge on the extinguisher may indicate that all is well, but that is only an indication that the unit is charged with air. It is not an indication of the condition of the powder, and the attempted use of an extinguisher with solidified powder can be dangerous. So make sure your extinguisher is serviced once a year.

Also, when shopping, make sure the dealer you choose shows you the proper way to use an extinguisher. Some dealers will actually have you put out some small fire so you will see firsthand how an extinguisher actually works. These are the dealers you should buy from.

Remember, if you attempt to extinguish a fire yourself, be sure you can do it safely. If there is reasonable doubt about your safety and the safety of your family, get out. After extinguishing a fire, call the fire department. It is a good idea to have them check things out, especially in the case of an electrical fire. After putting the fire out, stay on the scene until the fire department arrives. Never assume the fire is out.

There may be a time when you attempt to put out a fire with an extinguisher that is not rated for the type of fire you are having. Understand that this extinguisher may knock down the fire but may not completely extinguish it. Be prepared for flashbacks or rekindles by having another means of extinguishment ready, i.e., have water available after knocking down a Class A fire with a BC-rated extinguisher.

Improvising like this is usually all right if you are aware of the necessary backup steps. However, never improvise by using an A-rated water extinguisher on a Class B flammable liquid fire or a Class C electrical fire. Persons using a water extinguisher in these situations are putting themselves in jeopardy. Call the fire department if you have any questions on extinguisher use, and be sure of your safety.

brought a lawsuit against Laub for his use of the term, claiming they had a trademark on the saying "Clintville-by-the-Sea." Laub has been using the word Clintville on his shop in Paradise Mall and on T-shirts and other paraphernalia.

However, it seems the judge felt the term was too specific to Carmel and the Mayor Clint Eastwood to trademark. I guess it's sort of like trying to trademark a slang term or popular phrase.

Both Clintville in Paradise Mall on the corner of Ocean and Dolores (Laub's place), and the Bavarian Shop on the corner of Dolores and Fifth (Clark's place), will continue to sell T-shirts with the slogan Clintville. And may the best product win.

SPEAKING OF LAWSUITS

The Carmel Plaza has filed a lawsuit to evict one of its tenants, Brown's Barn.

The women's apparel shop has been in the Plaza for 10 years, but Plaza leasing manager Steven Jacobs said they would not comply with a provision to remodel and upgrade the appearance of the shop. Shop owner Susan Brown said the upgrade the Plaza wanted was too expensive, particularly after the shop being hidden behind Plaza construction for the past year and the large Joseph Magnin location, now Saks Fifth Avenue, having been empty for a year. In the past ten years, she added, Brown's Barn has paid its rent on time, no matter what the conditions were in the Plaza in general.

"If I had tenant who had paid its rent promptly on the first for ten years, I would want to keep them," she said.

Brown said she is looking for a new location, preferably buy a building of her own, somewhere in Carmel.

• The Plaza has is working on signin- up a Laura Ashley store. The store would not be ready until next year, I hear.

PINEWHISPERS

A golden affair

THE MONTEREY County Fair opened in style Tuesday morning with a grand pancake breakfast hosted by the Monterey Kiwanis Club and soldiers of the 7th Infantry Division (Light).

Kiwanians dished out the breakfast goodies (pancakes, sausage, milk, coffee and fruit) while soldiers did most of the flapjack flipping and the 7th Infantry Band providing some rousing stay-awake music to go along with the hot coffee.

Mayors from peninsula cities and Salinas, including our own Mayor Clint, were in attendance at the fete, the traditional kick-off for the county fair. The MC, however, most have lost his senses temporarily; while introducing the dignitaries in attendance, he neglected to introduce the Mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea until reminded by several members of the audience. "I know that'll cost me at least a thousand dollars at the next meeting," moaned the embarassed Kiwanian to a roar of laughter.

Lines for the breakfast, held on the grounds fronting the Garden Stage, wound their way back almost to the entrance, indicating a very successful event, perhaps the biggest turnout the fair has ever seen.

Hizzoner, always the gracious public servant, shook hands, chatted, and posed for photographs with the Carmel Business Association scarecrow, Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo and her husband Barney, members of the Soroptimists of Carmel at their wine cooler booth, Alan Brenner (dressed in friar's robes) at the Carmel booth, and with Goldie, the fair mascot (also known as Marabee Boone of the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce).

This is the first year Carmel has sponsored a booth at the fair; this year's theme is the Carmel Mission, thus the friar's robes.

The fair runs through Sunday, Aug. 17. Carmel's "day" is Saturday, Aug. 16.

GUIDE DOGS PROGRAM GAINS $5,000

Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc is providing 16 guide dogs for sight-impaired persons in Monterey County, it was reported at a board meeting at Carmel Valley Country Club for the San Rafael-based organization.

A fund-raising dinner was held at the home of Virginia Stanton; proceeds from the dinner and volunteer donations provided an estimated $5,000 for the guide dog program. Walter Stewart of Carmel Valley served as chairman at the two-day session.

The dinner, catered by Fifth Avenue Deli of Carmel, was served on tables decorated by Kitty Ragsdale. Entertainment was provided by pianist Richard LaSalle of Carmel and guitarist Eddie Erickson of Pacific Grove.

The committee on arrangements included Mrs. Robert Meyer, Mrs. Hal Compton, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. George Fletcher, and Mrs. Charles Spangenberg.

Stewart and Stanton hosted a breakfast for board members at Gardiner's Tennis Ranch Aug. 10.

ARE YOU WASTING MONEY ON VITAMINS?????

Recent investigated findings in the field of bio-mechanics suggest that many people are not fully assimilating the foods they eat and the vitamins and minerals that they take supplementary to their regular diet.

So, although they take adequate amounts of the various food supplements, because their body is not able to assimilate and digest them, they are not deriving the results they desire.

DR. BEACHAM

When internal organs concerned with digestion aren't secreting their fluids properly, most of the vitamins and minerals are excreted by the body instead of being absorbed. The organs I'm speaking of are mainly the stomach, liver, gall bladder, small and large intestines. If you are suffering from constipation, gas, sensation of fullness, belching or regurgitation of food, more likely your digestive processes are malfunctioning. Chiropractic research has shown that if the bio-mechanics related to the nervous system are repaired and proper nerve innervation is restored to the various organs, more complete digestion is likely to occur. This, of course, would facilitate the absorption of those supplimentary vitamins you may need; however, you may now find that you no longer need those additional vitamins.

These 'rising stars' have big hopes for future

Story and photos
By HOLLY McFARLAND

THEIR FACILITY may be modest and their teams small, but Carmel's Rising Star Gymnastics team has big hopes for the future.

At Sunset Center, the team of about 13 aspiring young female athletes spend hours polishing their intricate routines for state competitive meets that are months away. Under the direction of coach and founder of Rising Star, Kathleen Brady, some of the advanced team members clock in a 20-hour weekly schedule of regular training along with morning weightlifting, running and dance classes.

"I brought two of the kids, Renee Shillcock and Holly Powell (who has since moved to Oregon), to the highest level in state competition this year," said Brady.

"It's exciting because you work so hard and you don't know for sure if you can really do it," Brady continued. "You think maybe I'm not good enough, the kids are not good enough, maybe the gym is not equipped enough, but I get a feeling that you don't need the best facility to produce top-level gymnasts.

"You have to have good coaching, dedicated gymnasts and a little talent," she said.

That talent will be on display locally as the team is performing a tumbling, gymnastics and dance repertoire on the Garden Stage at the Monterey County Fair tonight Aug. 14, at 5 p.m. and again at 2:30 p.m. Friday through Sunday, Aug. 15 through 17 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds.

"We will have 26 gymnasts performing in a 30-minute long program, 4 to 6-year-olds performing along with a show from the intermediate and advanced team," Brady said.

While gymnastics in general has enjoyed a surge in popularity since Mary Lou Retton's Olympic medal-winning performances in 1984, there has been likewise a need for a solid program on the Monterey Peninsula, Brady said.

What began four years ago as a recreation program for peninsula-wide enthusiasts has, under Brady's direction, now burgeoned from 25 sign-ups to about 200 club members.

A core of two gymnastic teams grew out of the recreational classes, about 10 on the intermediate team and 13 on the advanced team for girls.

Brady, whose background involved gymnastic studies at Westchester State and Penn State in Pennsylvania, understands the hardships of preparing for the coming meets.

"It's the type of sport where you work the entire year and for only four months from January through April you compete in five or six meets," Brady said.

And to qualify for those early year state meets the gymnast must first do well in preliminary competition in the fall.

"If you score high enough in those initial preliminary meets in the fall, then you qualify for division meets where typically 150 compete in each group and finally 60 are chosen to compete at the state level," Brady explained.

The physical and mental demands are what keep the girls on a one-track course — to be the best gymnasts they can be.

"When I won at the state meet this year all the long hours of work was worth it for that one moment of victory," said Renee Shillcock, a 10-year veteran of the team.

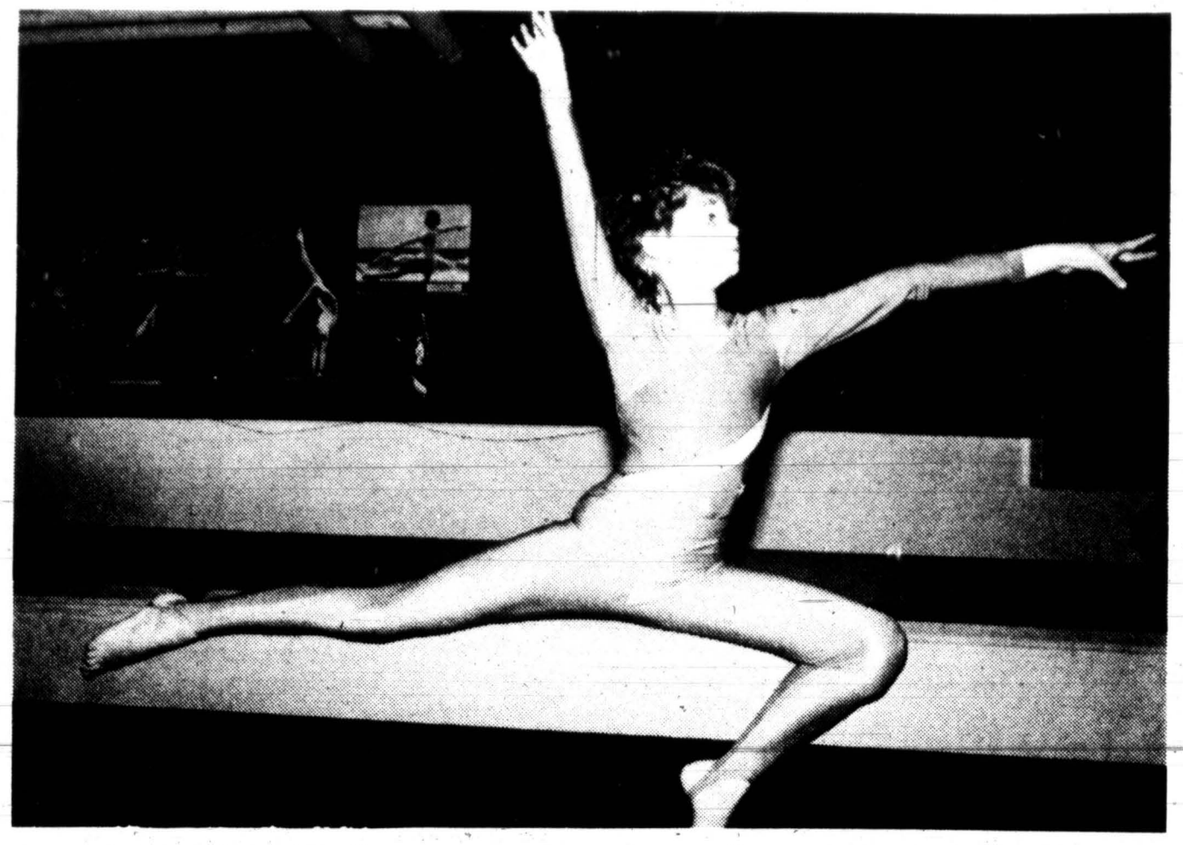
A more recent newcomer to the program, 10-year old Kimmy Wilday, gleaned a lot from Rising Star.

"Kathleen is a great coach and one of the reasons that I've grown so much, being at it for only three years," Wilday said. "It's the right motivation. They want you to work hard and they are strict."

The endless hours of working on skills is part of the educational process of athletics, according to Brady.

"You're a mentor to these kids because you're teaching them discipline," Brady said. "People wonder how they are going to keep their grades up as students and it's because they are so used to structure that their parents don't have to tell them to study."

A balance of encouragement and discipline is Brady's magic formula.



KIMMY WILDAY of Pacific Grove executes a stay split leap during a recent practice at Sunset Center gym where the Rising Star gymnastics team works out.

"Right before state competition she (Brady) pushed us hard to do routines even if we were in pain," Shillcock said. "She just kept pushing us, but if she hadn't we wouldn't have done as well in the competition."

Brady demands technical perfection whether it be a routine on the bars, floor exercises, or balance beam.

"They can't just learn a trick any way they want to," Brady said. "It has to be perfect if they want to score well. It takes a lot of studying and we watch a lot of video tapes. A lot of it is hit and miss and they must repeat skills thousands of times. They may be out there on the bars doing 20 of one exercise and up to 10 routines."

Not only is it hard work, but the instructional costs, travel, meet and summer camp expenses can add up to about $2,000 a year for the advanced team members.

But the fine caliber of instruction and extra expenses is worth it to the team members.

In her tiny office downstairs at Sunset Center, the team members clamor for Brady's attention, asking questions about their daily routines.

Brady, although carrying a slight frame and soft-spoken manner, has a sudden surge of energy that keeps her going through the hours of coordination and "mothering."

And if questioned at length about future dreams, Brady says quite matter-of-factly: "That I would have one Olympic medal in six years, that would be exceptional."

"But it may not be a far-off possibility since two of the gymnasts have graduated up to Class I, the highest level of state competition," Brady adds.

The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The Geriatric Research, Education and Clinical Center of the U.S. Veterans Administration Medical Center is trying to promote a new safety consciousness among the nation's senior citizens. Some suggestions regarding bathroom safety: apply nonskid adhesive strips on the bottoms of bathtubs and keep a nonskid mat on the floor beside the tub; keep soap in a high-walled dish or on a rope to prevent it from slipping into the tub; install grab rails by the commode and tub; and apply oils after your bath, rather than during it, since bath oil tends to make the tub slippery.

"Poor nutrition is a very big problem as we grow older," says Professor Linda Chen of the University of Kentucky. Her studies show that as many as half of Americans over age 65 consume less than two-thirds of the recommended daily allowance of such nutrients as calcium, iron, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and Vitamins A and C. Other substances commonly deficient in older people are zinc, folate and Vitamins B6 and B12. Studies show that vitamin and mineral supplements can go far toward eliminating those deficiencies, but they should only be taken under the guidance of a physician.

'Pipe Dream' summons mixed memories of the Cannery Row of old

By ANNE PAPINEAU

A VISION of Cannery Row constructed in a pine grove in Carmel in some ways bears more resemblance to the place immortalized by John Steinbeck than the real row does today.

"We had an eye on verisimilitude," noted Hamish Tyler, director of the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical Pipe Dream now running at Carmel's historic outdoor Forest Theater.

The Cannery Row where fortunes mirrored the size of the sardine catch is recreated in a set devised by Carey Crockett and crew. Crockett consulted photographs in creating on stage a circa 1948 Cannery Row, crowded with its smokestacks, signage and storefronts. Lending further credance to the set is a tattered 1924 Model T Ford flatbed truck, which by the way is for sale.

John Steinbeck's novel Sweet Thursday provided the springboard for Pipe Dream. Consulting with Steinbeck, Rodgers and Hammerstein composed a musical that ran for about a year on Broadway in the mid-'50s. For that premiere production, opera star Helen Traubel appeared in the pivotal role of Suzy.

"She was totally miscast," observed Michael Hemp, executive director of the Cannery Row Foundation, an organization devoted to collecting and preserving the colorful history of the row. "How they took an opera star and placed her in a major musical ... it's sort of like having Joan Sutherland for Cats."

Hemp and many others contributed historical background and in cases actual memories of the people who were the inspiration for Steinbeck's book.

"John Steinbeck did not write fiction," Hemp said. "The cast of Pipe Dream was very interested in hearing of the real characters. I can demonstrate John (Steinbeck) wrote very little fiction. He wrote tales of the row and interpretations of them, of Pulitzer Prize-winning quality."

James P. Kinney, who portrays "Mac — the natural leader of the Cannery Row bums," undertook substantial research to convey the spirit of the era and its characters.

"I've done a lot of shows — 80 — and I've said no to a lot of shows around here because I just don't want to invest the time," explained Kinney, who wrote and appears in God's Matador, a one-man play about mission founder Junipero Serra. "I did Pipe Dream with an express purpose because it was about the characters I'm interested in."

After Pipe Dream opened, Kinney and other cast members enjoyed a genuine "life imitates art" experience.

"(Restaurant owner) Kalisa threw a party for us down on Cannery Row, and we were sitting outside after the show in costume and makeup. No sooner did we get talking, here comes a cop car and he walks into Kalisa's, paying no attention to us. He goes inside and Kalisa comes out and tells us we can't drink out there. Here is life imitating art."

That evening Kinney met one of the authentic cannery workers, Charles Nonella, who is director of the Cannery Row Alumni.

"Talking to Charles was a gold mine," Kinney added. "Here I am playing a part and here is a man who knew Mac and knew him well. He told me Mac could charm the birds out of the trees and was totally devoted to the proposition that no one ever worked. Mac is a guy who opposes the straight world.

"Charles said that Mac had had a family, had a job, and he just gave it all up. All of them were totally dedicated to Doc (Ricketts), their patron saint down there."

Mac's "anti-work" sentiments are expressed in Pipe Dream via the song, On a Lopsided Bus.

Lee Harbick, a member of the Forest Theater Guild Board of Directors and former editor and publisher of Game and Gossip, is another of those who contributed insight into the real people who inspired Pipe Dream.

A personal friend of Steinbeck, Ricketts, Flora Woods and those other Cannery Row immortals, Harbick noted "Real life is more exciting than when somebody makes something up. I think Steinbeck was promoting himself and a make-believe world. based on reality, was frequented by Steinbeck, Ricketts and Lee Harbick.

"During the war, Sonny Boy furnished us with as much meat, chicken and butter as we needed, despite the rationing. We didn't go hungry because Sonny Boy was so gracious," she recalled.

According to Harbick, when Pipe Dream was first produced in 1955, Sonny Boy was the only character depicted in the musical who was still living.

"He wanted to go back to New York, to the cast party, and have Steinbeck introduce him as the last of the Mohicans," Harbick noted. "Steinbeck had a publicist and a manager, and we wrote to her, called on the phone, sent telegrams, and Sonny Boy was ignored completely. Sonny Boy used to call us several times a day. He pined about this. But he just didn't want to go as a person going to the play, he wanted to go to the cast party. That November he died suddenly of a heart attack."

Cannery Row Foundation Director Michael Hemp praised the Forest Theater show, but pointed out that the Rodgers and Hammerstein script and its 1948 time-frame are at odds with reality.

"This was based on Sweet Thursday, which was written in 1954 and was primarily about Cannery Row after Ed Ricketts returned from the war," Hemp explained. "The sardines were going and the canneries were closing, but these are a couple of examples of the kind of license John (Steinbeck) takes with his material. The bordellos were closed down by the directive of Earl Warren in 1941. John's allowed to do this. Technically an author gets to stage anything he wants. The Bear Flag (bordello) was no longer there. It was being replaced by a warehouse in 1948."

The historian added the footnote that "John's allowed to take this license with his material. I don't think anybody should feel any too critical of his use of it because he's writing for a world audience. This is a lighthearted musical not intended to be a reflec-

The music of 'Amadeus' celebrated in Monterey

THE PREMIERE Mozart in Monterey Festival continues its program with an evening of chamber music, two orchestral concerts, a piano recital by Jeffrey Siegel and a free concert featuring soprano Virginia Sublett.

From 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 14 the atrium lobby of the Monterey Sheraton, 350 Calle Principal, will provide the setting for a free community concert.

"We have assembled a stellar group of major instrumentalists," noted Oleg Kovalenko, music director for Mozart in Monterey, "and will present one of the finest chamber orchestras to be heard on the West Coast, in which the musicians are either artists of soloist status, or are concertmasters or principal chair players in major symphonies."

SOPRANO Virginia Sublett will solo in choral works by Mozart as part of the first Mozart in Monterey festival.

The free, hour-long concert will include the romping overture to "The Impresario," K. 486; the "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320; the Symphony No. 39, K. 543, "Eine kleine Nachtmusik," K. 525; and the soprano exhibition piece, "Exsultate, jubilate," K. 165, sung by Virginia Sublett.

Sublett specializes in the repertoire of Mozart and the Italian bel canto. She performs with numerous West Coast opera companies, including the San Diego, Long Beach and Riverside operas, and is also a frequent oratorio and concert soloist.

A brown bag luncheon will be offered in the lobby of the Sheraton during the concert. This free performance is sponsored by the Monterey Sheraton in conjunction with the Hotel and Restaurant Association of the Monterey Peninsula and the Performance Trust Fund of Musician's Local 616.

FOR THE 8 P.M. Thursday, Aug. 14 chamber concert, members of the festival orchestra will form various instrumental groups to present some of Mozart's most striking, but seldom-heard compositions. All of the following concerts will be presented in Steinbeck Forum of the Monterey Conference Center, Del Monte and Alvarado, downtown Monterey.

Featured artists on Thursday will be Myra Kestenbaum, viola soloist with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra; Sheridon Stokes, flutist and a recording artist in Los Angeles; Dominick Fera, clarinet soloist and recording artist; Raphael Kramer, cello soloist; Thomas Boyd, solo oboist for conductor John Williams and composer John Barry, and others.

The chamber music program will feature Mozart's Quartet in F for Oboe, Violin, Viola and Cello, K. 370; canzonetta: "Ridente la calma," K. 579; aria: "Un moto de gioia mi sento," K. 579; Duo in G for Violin and Viola, K. 423; Quartet in D for Flute, Violin, Viola and Cello, K. 285.

Additional pieces include Handel's Meine Seele Hort in Sehen, HWV 207; Flammende Rose, Zierde der Erden, HWV 207; Rossini's La regata veneziana: Three Canzonettas and Schubert's Der Hirt aug dem Felsen, Op. 129.

Concertmaster for the 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 15 concert will be Elaine Skorodin, soloist with the Chicago, St. Louis, Baltimore, Washington, National and London symphonies, among others.

Soprano Virginia Sublett will solo in Mozart's Exsultalte, jubilate; the arias "Resta o cara," "O zittre nicht, mein lieber Sohn!" from The Magic Flute; and "Fra l'oscure ombre funeste" from Davidde penitente.

Also highlighting the Friday concert will be the overture to The Impresario, K. 486; Serenade No. 9 in D Major, K. 320 (Posthorn); and Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 in D, Op. 25 (Classical).

At 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 16, artist-in-residence Jeffrey Siegel will appear as soloist with the orchestra and in a recital with commentary, "The Romanticism of Mozart." Siegel has been dubbed "the Leonard Bernstein of the keyboard" by the Chicago Tribune and has appeared with every major American and European orchestra.

Saturday's repertoire will include Mozart's Adagio in B, K. 540; Sonata in A, K. 310; Fantasia in C, K. 396 and Variations on "Ah, vous dirai-je, maman," K. 265.

Following Saturday's concert, a gala reception is planned at the Monterey Plaza on Cannery Row. Persons donating $1,000 or more to Monterey Mozarteum, Inc., organizer of the festival, will be admitted to the gala.

The public may also attend the post-concert gala at a cost of $25 per person.

Final concert of the first Mozart in Monterey festival will be performed at 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17. Concertmaster that day will be Nathan Rubin, concertmaster of the Oakland Symphony and the San Francisco Ballet and a noted chamber music performer in the San Francisco Bay Area.

The concert will feature the following works by Mozart: Symphony No. 31 in D, K. 297; Concerto No. 23 in A for Piano and Orchestra, K, 488; Symphony No. 41 in C, K. 551 (Jupiter); and Simple Symphony, Op. 4 (1934) by Britten.

Jeffrey Siegel will be the featured soloist in the piano concerto.

Concert tickets are $17 each or $75 for the series.

For additional information about Mozart in Monterey, contact its office at 499 Calle Principal, Monterey, 93940, 372-3355.

Youth orchestra concerts continue

THE HIDDEN Valley Summer Seminar Orchestra will perform a free concert featuring works of Tchaikovsky, Liszt and Copland at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17.

Denis de Coteau and Henry Holt conduct the 65-member youth orchestra.

Sunday's program includes Symphony No. 2 by Tchaikovsky, Liszt's Les Preludes and Copland's Buckaroo Holiday from Rodeo.

De Coteau is music director and conductor of the San Francisco Ballet Orchestra. Under his baton, the Oakland Symphony Youth Orchestra became the first American youth orchestra to win silver and bronze medals at the von Karajan International Competition in Germany.

Holt returns for a fifth year to serve as music director for Hidden Valley's youth orchestral program, now in its 23rd year. Holt comes to Hidden Valley from the Baton Rouge Opera where he serves as music director. In his 18 years with the Seattle Opera, Holt conducted more than 1,000 performances.

The theater at Hidden Valley Music Seminars is located off Carmel Valley Road at Ford Road, 11 miles east of Highway 1 in Carmel Valley. For additional concert information, call 659-3115.

Smoke-free travel survival kit now available

The American Lung Association of Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Luis Obispo Counties is offering nonsmokers a new free "Survival Kit for Smoke-Free Travel."

The package includes a list of California hotels and motels which have rooms reserved for nonsmokers and information on restaurants with no-smoking sections.

The kit also includes two kinds of self-adhesive stickers for attachment to restaurant tabs. One variety offers "thanks," if a nonsmoking section is available; the other kind of sticker asks the restaurant owner to consider such a section for the comfort of guests.

The free kit is available this month at the American Lung Association's toll-free number: 800-824-7888, operator 535.

According to Fay Catlett, program coordinator of the association, the Smoke-Free Travel Kit is part of the Lung Association's effort to remind smokers and nonsmokers that tobacco smoke in the air inhaled by nonsmokers can be a health hazard. She pointed out that a research scientist at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has calculated that 500 to 5,000 deaths occur each year in the U.S. because of passive smoking.

tion of the street. If you took this script literally you'd be year's off."

Hamish Tyler, director of the Forest Theater production, noted "Some of the old timers do not have a fondness for Steinbeck. He was aloof, gruff. In Doc he found warmth, the qualities he lacked."

Tyler recalled sending costume photographs to his mother, a former cannery worker, to check the authenticity of the outfits.

"Broadway almost shied away from the regionalism in this piece because they were afraid it would bring the show down. By doing that, it did," he said. "You do need to cut and slash, re-arrange the order of scenes. We cut some songs. But even a lesser Rodgers and Hammerstein is a heck of a lot better than now."

The Forest Theater in itself is an historical entity. Built in 1910, it is the oldest outdoor theater in the state.

The Forest Theater Guild mounts two productions each summer. Pipe Dream followed on the heels of The Madwoman of Chaillot.

"We're the last true concept of community theater on the Monterey Peninsula," Tyler said. "We do not pay our performers. We know the local theaters try to pay stipends and scholarships. Philosophically the board is opposed to that. Here it's just a love for theater and the material we're dealing with."

Tyler reserved praise for the behind-the-scenes technical crew, and for the 18-member orchestra which is composed chiefly of student musicians.

"Our cellist, who is around age 11, is a child prodigy and the instrument is almost as tall as she is."

"We were finding all kinds of texture and sub-texture to the script," Tyler added. "Which is why we're having so much fun with it. It's our own heritage — tradition. It's provoked an interest among the younger members of the cast in Steinbeck's works."

Pipe Dream continues Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 until Aug. 30 at the outdoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel. Audience members are advised to dress warmly.

Goodwill 'yard sale' specializes in books

Goodwill Industries is planning "yard sales" at many of their stores in Santa Cruz and Monterey counties — but they are yard sales with a difference.

Starting Monday, Aug. 18, and continuing through Saturday, Aug. 23 (or while the supply lasts), they will be selling a yard — 36 inches — of books for $10.

"Yard Sale" participants are the Goodwill Stores in downtown Santa Cruz, in Watsonville, Castroville, Seaside, the two Salinas stores, and of course the Goodwill BookStation in west-side Santa Cruz.

The event is designed to celebrate the first anniversary of the Santa Cruz BookStation, which opened last summer in a former gas station. Holding about 15,000 volumes (hardback and paperback) in its 600 square feet, the BookStation also has parking for customers and an Attended Donation Station on the site at 1500 Mission St.

All books in stock at the participating Goodwill Stores will be sold for $10 a yard, with the exception of some special categories of books at the BookStation.

A recent call for heavy paper sacks has brought in enough bags to enable customers to take home their yards of books safely.

County fair mints golden anniversary memories

A FOUR-ALARM chili cook-off and performances by the eight-member band Tierra are among the highlights of the final days of the 50th anniversary Monterey County Fair.

The golden anniversary edition of the fair continues daily through Sunday, Aug. 17. In addition to the featured entertainment, fairgoers can take in their share of prize-winning Monterey County produce and livestock, view top notch arts, crafts and even cakes and cookies in the exhibit halls, sample a variety of foods available for sale and take a mind-spinning ride on one of the midway attractions.

Last year 43 teams from throughout Monterey County competed in the Chili Cook-off, with the Salinas Fire Department team emerging as champions. They went on to finish third in the regional championship. The 1986 winner will also represent this area in the regionals.

Entries have already closed for the cook-off, with the $25 entry fee going to the United Way.

Sunday's cook-off schedule is as follows: 7 to 11 a.m., set-up and decoration of booths, cooking from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. and then judging and sampling by the public.

Organizers have added special daily community exhibits to this year's commemorative events. Each day of the six-day fair, which began last Tuesday, has been designated to honor the various communities in the county to thank them for their support of the fair over the past half-century. Each region will highlight its history, traditions and culture via exhibits.

Goldie the scarecrow, selected by the fair's anniversary committee to symbolize the significant role agriculture plays in the county, is on hand to greet fairgoers. Goldie will also be in attendance for the newest of the fair's competitions: a scarecrow design contest.

Community days and individual themes include:

- Monterey/Pacific Grove, Thursday, Aug. 14. Monterey, one-time "Sardine Capital of the World," will display artifacts centered around its fabled fishing industry.
- Salinas Day, Friday, Aug. 15. Salinas cherishes its reputation as the seat of government in Monterey County. The Salinas exhibit will present history and information about the town's traditions and special events, such as the California Rodeo and the Steinbeck Festival.
- Carmel/Carmel Valley/Big Sur Day, Saturday, Aug. 16. Carmel's theme will center around the history of the Carmel Mission, founded in 1771 by Father Junipero Serra. Carmel Valley representatives will provide a portrait of their community as a unique farming and tourist location. Big Sur will offer an in-depth opportunity to learn about its history and the pristine beauty of the Big Sur coast.
- Seaside/Marina/Fort Ord Day, Sunday, Aug. 17. Seaside's theme will focus on its development as a cultural and economic community. Marina, the newest, but most rapidly growing community on the Monterey Peninsula, will present a look at its development from the 1930s. Fort Ord will present displays of military equipment and explain its role in the county.

The diverse musical entertainment this year will include concerts by country singer Eddy Raven, who will perform two shows on two nights, 7 and 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Aug. 15 and 16 on the Garden Stage.

The LaFayette, La. native is known for hits like Operator, Operator, Thank God for Kids, and his 1984 No. 1 hit single I Got Mexico. He's charted three Top 10 singles and is a 14-time winner of American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) songwriting awards.

Latin rock group Tierra will also be performing on stage for two shows, 6 and 8 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17 on the Garden Stage.

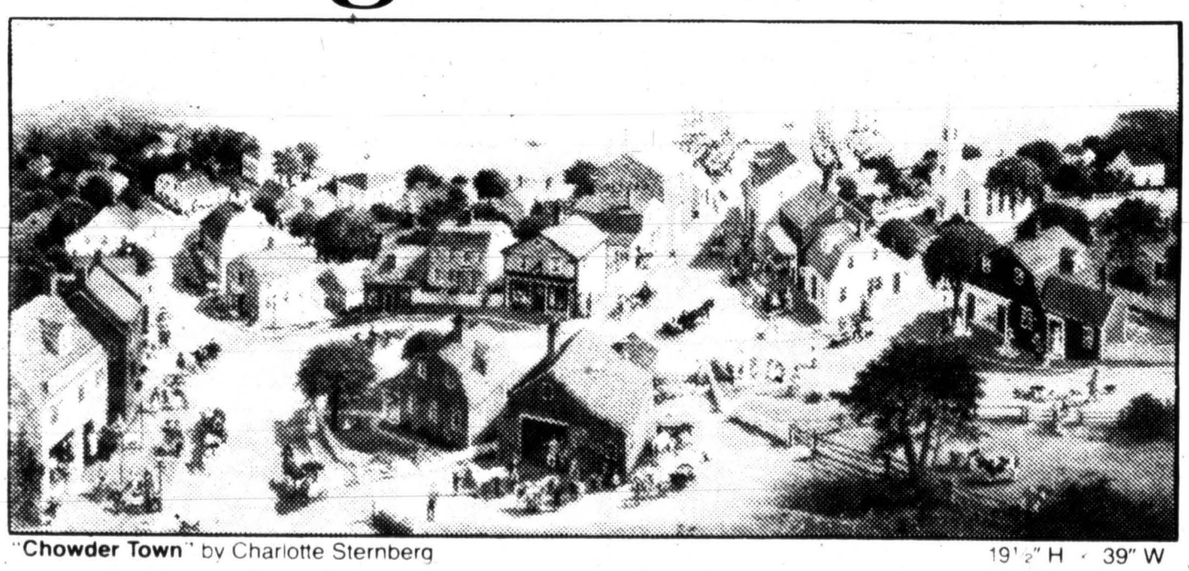
The Magic of Americana.



"Chowder Town" by Charlotte Sternberg 19½" H × 39" W

Art by Charlotte Sternberg and William Jauquet.

What is "Americana"? Quite simply, things that are uniquely American. It is creations that tell the story of our land, our people, our culture. It's handmade quilts and horsedrawn buggies, clocks and crocks and tobacco tins. It is things from the past that serve today as nostalgic reminders of easier times, simple pleasures and homespun virtues.

Americana is the art of Charlotte Sternberg and William Jauquet, shown in Carmel exclusively at GWS Galleries. The painting pictured here is available as a signed and numbered fine art print, as are many others. These original woodcarvings are among those being shown at GWS Galleries.

FIRST CHURCH WAS EPISCOPAL

Although Pacific Grove was founded as a methodist retreat, the first church building was for an Episcopalian congregation, St. Mary's-by-the-Sea. It had such a pleasing design that when the time came to enlarge it, rather than add onto it awkwardly the decision was made to cut it in half across the middle move the two halves apart and elongate the building.

THE WATSONVILLE Band will perform an old fashioned band concert Sunday, Aug. 17 at Carmel's historic outdoor Forest Theater. Admission is free to the 2 p.m. show.

Watsonville Band presents Sunday show

A classic Sunday-afternoon-in-the-park variety of a concert is the next offering in the free concert series at the outdoor Forest Theater, Carmel.

The Watsonville Band will perform at 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17 at the historic outdoor theater. The players' repertoire includes overtures, marches and special band arrangements of the light classics.

Concert-goers are encouraged to arrive early and enjoy a picnic lunch on the theater grounds. The Forest Theater is located at Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel.

For additional information about this free concert series, call 624-3996.

Ray Swanson paintings featured

PAINTINGS BY Ray Swanson will be the subject of a one-man show at Gallery Americana, Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue, Carmel. An opening reception is planned 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 16. The artist will be present.

Swanson is regarded as one of the foremost painters of southwestern Native Americans. He has received multiple awards for his paintings of the Navajo, Zuni and Hopi. Swanson now has broadened his subject matter to depict the virtually unchanging enclaves still found on other continents, including Africa and Europe.

Swanson's latest exhibit at Gallery Americana reflects his new horizons in painting. While this new show will continue featuring his North American portraits, emphasis will also be given to the people living in the rural areas of Europe and North Africa.

During a painting odyssey in those regions, Swanson found himself, as a farmer at heart, seeking out the shepherds and the farms in the context of, as he reports, "earthy happenings."

Then, ranging in his observations from the fields and the harvests to the timeless monolithic villages, Swanson proceeded to compose the artistic statement he would make — a spectrum of paintings capturing the peoples of field and village.

He was struck by the monolithic character of the villages, the ageless patinas, and subtle monochromatic colors that invite light and shadow to dominate. These qualities appeared to further unify and highlight the subtle architecture, the curving cobblestone streets, and the open air marketplaces ... the fields, villages and people.

For additional information about this next collection of paintings by Ray Swanson, contact Gallery Americana, 624-5071.

POET PEGGY Peter (left), and Carmel artist Helen Barker collaborated on Verse and Views. They will sign copies of the new book 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17 at the Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard.

Artist, poet collaborate on volume

HELEN BARKER and Peggy Peter, illustrator and authors of a book of poems, Verse and Views, will be the guests at the Thunderbird Bookshop at a signing reception in their honor from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 17.

Works by Carmel artist Helen Barker have hung in many California galleries, including the De Young Museum in San Francisco, the Los Angeles City Hall Tower and the Biltmore Gallery in Los Angeles.

A gallery owner in Carmel for many years, she presently owns the Helen Barker Gallery in the Barnyard at the mouth of Carmel Valley. She is a member of the Carmel Art Association.

In Verse and Views Barker's work illustrates in full color the poetry of San Francisco writer Peggy Peter, as well as her own verse. A long-time Carmel resident and now a frequent visitor, Peter has been writing and enjoying poetry since the age of 6.

Citing inspiration from the likes of Robert Frost and Walt Whitman, her poetry in Verse and Views reflects her relationship with the beauty of Carmel-by-the-Sea and surrounding areas.

The Thunderbird Bookshop is located in the Barnyard at Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road. For more information, call 624-1803.

CITY COUNCIL
CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
ORDINANCE NO. 86-14
AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING WATER RESERVE GOALS AND PROCEDURES FOR ESTABLISHING AND MAINTAINING COMPLIANCE WITH THESE GOALS TO ASSURE THAT WATER CONSUMPTION WITHIN THE CITY DOES NOT EXCEED ITS TOTAL WATER SUPPLY

WHEREAS, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has adopted a long-term water allocation plan which limits the water resources available to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to 5.542% of the total District supply; and
WHEREAS, this allocation creates a total supply of 1030.8 acre-feet of water per year for Carmel-by-the-Sea; and
WHEREAS, the use of water within the City has been steadily increasing since the drought of 1975 through 1977, and for the most recent twelve-month period the City consumed more than 98% of its total water allocation; and
WHEREAS, the City's management of water supplies as established in Ordinances 84-2 and 85-1 provide for the creation of a water reserve to be achieved through the implementation of conservation measures; and
WHEREAS, without such a reserve, the City is vulnerable to periodic fluctuations in water consumption from changes in the local weather and economic conditions; and
WHEREAS, the use of conserved water for new development, as authorized by City Ordinances, has the potential to preclude the maintenance of a verifiable water reserve and exposes the City to a potential development moratorium imposed by the District; and
WHEREAS, the Water Management District has proposed the suspension of permit processing for the extension and expansion of water systems serving the City for an indefinite period; and
WHEREAS, this proposed action would prohibit the development and improvement of property within the City to the detriment of the planning and zoning goals, policies and ordinances of the City and in contravention of statewide planning goals favoring infill and residential development within each region; and
WHEREAS, the City has the responsibility under the Constitution and Statutes of the State of California to plan and guide its own development in a manner that reflects local conditions, yet is sensitive to the regional impacts of local actions; and
WHEREAS, the City recognizes the unique regional responsibilities of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District but finds that the management of the City's water resources can best be attained through local actions that are fully consistent with local planning goals, objectives, policies and ordinances and which do not result in the suspension of local autonomy in land-use matters,
NOW, THEREFORE, The City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea does ordain as follows:
Section One. The following section shall be added to Chapter Eight of Title 17 of the Municipal code:
17.08.080 Reserve Established
The City shall establish and maintain a water reserve. This reserve is established to assure that periodic and uncontrollable fluctuations in water use will not result in the City exceeding its water supply.
A. The reserve shall be attained by reducing water consumption within the City through conservation programs according to the following schedule:

Water Reserve Goals

Date	Conservation Increment	Water Reserve Total	Total Allowable Consumption
July 1, 1986	2%	2%	98%
July 1, 1987	2%	4%	96%
July 1, 1988	2%	6%	94%
July 1, 1989	2%	8%	92%
July 1, 1990	2%	10%	90%

B. Calculation of Running Twelve-Month Water Consumption
Compliance with the reserve goals established in subsection A shall be determined on a monthly basis and shall be based on the water consumption records provided to the City by the California-American Water Company. Upon receipt of each month's report of metered sales, a calculation shall be made by adding the total metered consumption for each of the immediately preceding eleven months to the consumption indicated for the current month.
C. Compliance
At the end of any three-consecutive-month period wherein the twelve-month water-consumption total calculated in subsection B has consistently remained below the total allowable consumption established for that fiscal year in subsection A, the City shall have achieved compliance with the reserve goals established by the ordinance.
D. Noncompliance
At the end of any single month wherein the running twelve-month water-consumption total, calculated in subsection B, exceeds the total allowable consumption of water resources established for that fiscal year in subsection A, the City shall have failed to comply with the reserve goals established by this ordinance.
For any period of time when the total allowable consumption is 96% or less and the total cumulative rainfall for the same twelve-month period used to calculate compliance is less than 16 inches, the City shall be deemed to be in compliance if the running twelve-month water-consumption total does not exceed 1010.2 acre-feet.
E. Effect of Compliance
Upon establishing or reestablishing compliance with the water-reserve goals set forth in subsection A, the City shall send notice by certified mail to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. Ten working days after transmittal of this notice, the City may resume issuing permits and licenses in conformance with Section 17.08.060 and the water allocations established therein.
F. Effect of Noncompliance
1) Upon determining that the City has failed to achieve compliance with the water-reserve goals established in subsection A herein-above, no building permit, business license, use permit or other land use entitlement authorizing the construction or carrying out of any project as defined in subsection C of Section 17.08.060 shall be issued by the Department of Community Planning and Building and Planning Commission.
2) Immediately upon determining a state of noncompliance, the Director of Community Planning and Building shall notify the City Council, the City Building Official, the City Administrator and the Water Management District. The Director shall forward a report to the City Council to be considered at the next regular or special Council meeting concerning the change in status of the City's water consumption. Upon receiving this report and verifying the status of noncompliance, the Council shall adopt a resolution confirming the Director's action.
Section Two. VIOLATIONS. Any person, firm or corporation, whether acting as principal or agent, employee or otherwise, violating or causing or permitting the violation of the provisions of this ordinance, is guilty of an infraction. Any building erected or any use established contrary to the provisions of this ordinance is hereby declared to be unlawful and a public nuisance and the City Attorney shall, upon order of the City Council, immediately commence action for the abatement or removal thereof.
Section Three. SEVERABILITY. If any part of this ordinance is found to be unenforceable, such finding shall not affect the enforceability of any other part.
Section Four. EFFECTIVE DATE. This ordinance is hereby declared tc be an urgency ordinance as set forth in Section 65858 of the planning and zoning statutes of the California Government Code. Any pending projects that have not received a building permit shall not be approved unless they comply with the terms of this ordinance.
In conformance with section 65858 of the California Government Code, this ordinace shall be valid for a period of forty-five (45) days after adoption unless it is extended as established by said Section or has been permanently adopted in conformance with Section 65854 through 65857 of the California Government Code.
